Senior Doug Clark knows how to stand out in a crowd of identically uniformed football players — mirror glasses.

Christmas came early in 1982, and chemistry teacher Mr. Hubert Alexander almost forgot to decorate his room.

"The administration would have me fired if I didn't do it (decorate), because so many people enjoy it, and it promotes the Christmas Spirit," joked Alexander.

But, eventually Alexander's students reminded him of the approaching season, and once again the room was decorated in the grand Christmas tradition that it had become accustomed to in the past.

"I enjoy the looks on the students' faces the next day when they see the big transition," said Mr. Alexander. "Some of the teachers bring their kids to see it, and that's fun too."

MHS begins 99th year of classes and 'class' Individuals show 'Real Class'

Take an old tattered Pioneer covered wagon, add 1200 Mooresville High School students and the result is a new wagon full of class that is pure gold.

Some 14 to 18 years ago our lives began. It was only through the help of friends, parents, and teachers that we grew into young adults. The friends we've made and the times we've shared will never be forgotten. We still have a long way to go, but with each day we are growing and learning.

Over the period of 99 years that Mooresville High School has existed, the students have been growing and changing with the desire that day they might have a class other schools can dream of. They have worked hard and have been dedicated to their goal. As a result of hard work and dedication that golden moment now arrived! It took a long time, but "Real Class Takes Time."

In 1983, Mooresville High School received an energy-saving facelift. The change consisted of replacing some of the windows with tinted glass and covering the remaining windows with insulation material. The change was brought about because of the skyrocketing costs of heating the school. At first, classes were interrupted by construction workers at the windows, but the students soon became accustomed to them as the work continued throughout the year.

Everyone and everything dress up for 1983 School receives facelift

In everything Mooresville High School students did in 1983 "Real Class" was apparent. Whether it was in athletics, academics, drama, choir, or band, the students at MHS had a distinct sort of pride that was uniquely MHS.

That pride was not only for themselves, but also for the school they represented.

Students represented the school by winning individual awards, group awards, and team awards.

Even the teachers at

MHS had pride in the school. They worked hard with the North Central Association of Secondary Schools so that once again Mooresville could achieve a North Central accreditation.

Escaping the "sting of a Hornet," junior Mike Overpeck, like many Pioneers, gains yardage during the Homecoming game.

Mooreville High School had not one, but two 1982 Homecoming queens. Lora Upton, in her first week as a foreign exchange student at Colegio Selecto Particular, a school in Ecuador, was also chosen as Homecoming Queen. "It was exciting to be elected, and because it was my first week of school it made me feel accepted," Lora said. Each candidate (or madrina) for the election had to stand in line in shorts or a mini skirt for all to see. Then they had to parade around the school in these outfits. Both the students and the teachers selected one girl as queen, and Lora was presented with a crown at the Homecoming soccer game.

Cramer is Homecoming queen; Hicks, Princess "Real Class" — a 48-0 victory

During the day there were carnivals and parades. At night there were fireworks and a dance. It must have been the fourth of July . . . No, just another MHS Homecoming.

Much hard work went into producing a Homecoming as elaborate as Mooreville's. Whether it was building floats, sponsoring a carnival, planning a parade, or organizing a dance, it took the help of everyone to make it a total success.

Thanks to the work of the Student Council, the Homecoming parade came off without a hitch. The main attractions were the band, the queen and princess candidates, and the class floats.

Then, the big moment arrived. After the band marched off the field, the football team was greeted with a rousing Pioneer welcome! On the Pioneers' first possession they scored and the fireworks could be heard and seen in the background to celebrate.

As the football teams left the field, Deanna Head took the platform to give the results of the float competition and to name the queen and princess. The junior float, "Smurf 'em Pioneers," was a winner as were princess, Kathy Hicks, and queen Tricia Cramer.

Throughout the second half of the game, fireworks continued to fill the sky as the Pioneers were victorious over the Beech Grove Hornets 48-0.

To celebrate the victory a dance was held in the gym after the game. It gave the students and alumni a chance to catch up on things. "Mooreville Homecomings are the best I've ever seen," said senior Tonya Moore. "The students get involved and that's what's important — getting involved and having a good time."

Junior Kathy Hicks and senior Traci Cramer hear the announcement that they are Homecoming princess and queen for 1982.

Student Council continued the tradition and led the Homecoming parade with its football helmet float

The float was constructed at the home of Vice-Principal Norbert Johnson. The Student Council, aided by Johnson and Student Council sponsor John Robertson, worked hard to complete the helmet for the parade

As in the past, the blue and gold helmet, which was a golf cart underneath, was driven by Student Council members through the parade, and around the carnival. It finally escorted the floats on to the football field to be judged

Powderpuff game added to Carnival agenda Juniors win the most contests

Homecoming 1982 got off to an early start. There were floats to build, a parade and dance to organize, queen and princess candidates to nominate, and a game to win!

Homecoming began with "Spirit Week." There was a button day, tie day, sweats day, dress-up day, and the traditional blue and gold day on Friday.

As the game neared, the celebration moved up to the football field for the Homecoming Carnival sponsored by the Athletic Department. It started and ended as one giant pep session with plenty to do in the middle.

Numerous clubs and organizations had booths set up as their way of showing school spirit. Girls displayed blue and gold carnations (a Homecoming tradition) sold and distributed by the Sunshine Society.

There were several competitions, they included the class tug-of-wars, won by the junior boys and the senior girls; the powderpuff finals, won by the seniors; the egg toss, won by Dawn Alexander (her second year) and Jeff Berg; and the hamburger eating contest, won by Gary Sarver and Gino Gonzales for the boys and Melodie Cochran and Amy Strohmeyer for the girls.

"I had a goal to sing in front of people, but I never had the guts to do it, so I wrote a song," said sophomore Carrie Henderson

Carrie wrote both the lyrics and melody to the song she titled "Strangers." (Choir director Gene Raymond helped her arrange it)

The song, which was about a boy and girl who think they're in love but need to get to know each other better, was a hit with the audience

It made me feel like I accomplished something I really wanted to do," said Carrie

Variety of talent entertains community Revue plays to packed house

It looked as if all of Mooresville had come to see the 1982 WAGON TRAILS Revue. A huge line reaching to the tennis courts formed 25 minutes before showtime. As an overwhelming number of people poured through the doors, the side bleachers had to be pulled out to compensate for the enormous crowd.

Many in the audience anxiously awaited the beginning of the show. The Stage Band opened the show with the song "Sun Cat." They were followed by various other acts. Soloists included: Pam Dunn, Brian Crites, Carrie Henderson, Amy Norris, Lori Hampton, Jonda Kizzee, Dena Davis, Chris Long, Tami Adams with a banjo medley, David Grubbs with a guitar medley, and Valerie Grubb on flute. There were several group acts including Faculty-Reverend barbershop quartet, Jam Inc. rock band, the football team singing "It's Hard to be Humble," all choirs, and even commercials by the yearbook staff. After Spotlighters finished their last number, the yearbook staff Annies closed the show with their version of "It's a Hard-Knock Life."

When four members of the football team whose jersey numbers when added equaled 100 were "picked at random" to sing "Standing on the Solid Rock" for WAGON TRAILS REVUE, no one expected they would become an instant success.

The group not only received a standing ovation at the Revue, but began to get immediate requests to sing other places.

Consisting of Kevin Bradshaw, Don Coffey, Brian Crites, and Marvin Jones, the quartet performed for many local churches, the national FCA "Athlete of the Year" banquet, and an Indianapolis Kiwanis prayer breakfast.

FCA quartet debuts; becomes local attraction Revs and teachers perform too!

"It was a little bit crowded to say the least," said senior Nora Franko.

That was the typical response from most of the people who attended the 1982 WAGON TRAILS Revue. In its 11th year as a tradition at Mooresville High School, the WAGON TRAILS staff got more than they had bargained for, people that is.

The main purpose of the Revue was to kick off the yearbook subscription campaign, but it provided entertainment and enjoyment at the same time. It was the 1982 debut for Spotlighters, Sugar-n-Spice, and the boys' quartet of Kevin Bradshaw, Donny Coffey, Brian Crites, and Marvin Jones.

The WAGON TRAILS staff presented comical commercials to promote yearbook sales. By changing the words of "It's a Hard-Knock Life," the staff attempted to convince everyone how hard they had it as staff members.

The show brought in a record amount of money, which provided the funds needed to begin work on the 1983 yearbook.

It was kind of like a dream come true for me, and being blue didn't even embarrass me!" said senior Rebecca Brinkmann. After all, everyone knows how much I love Smurfs!

The "dream" was that of becoming a Smurf and Rebecca almost made it! When faced with the decision of what to dress up as for Honor Society Goblin Grams, her decision was an easy one: Smurfette.

Rebecca immediately began preparing, and with a little help from friends her hat and costume were completed. "I mutilated a baseball cap and used a lot of paper mache to make my hat, but we finally got it done!" said Rebecca.

Everyone had one thing or another to say about it!" said Rebecca. Some liked it, some didn't!

Variety of groups contributes to school 'class' Organizations provide 'spark'

Mooresville High School continued to take pride in its clubs and organizations. Several of these clubs and organizations had numerous fundraisers and other activities.

Among those involved were the Athletic Department, which sponsored the Homecoming carnival for all to enjoy. The Student Council sponsored the Homecoming parade, most of the dances, and Santa Grams. The Honor Society, made up completely of Seniors, distributed Goblin Grams to add a touch of fun to Halloween.

The Sunshine Society once again sold carnations at Homecoming. They also helped with community interests such as the jump rope for heart and sold M & M'S.

The cheerleaders were busy year round with their activities. Their schedule involved cheering for football, girls' and boys' basketball games, and wrestling matches. Club leaders helped boost school spirit by sponsoring pep sessions throughout the school year.

In the spring, the club department presented Spring Spectacular, featuring the Cadet Choir, Varsity Singers, Sugar Spice, Spotlighters, many solo and ensemble.

As in the past, many activities were included in the curriculum, in an effort to involve all students.

Academics: the literal "class"

In 1983, Mooresville High School offered an ample number of academic courses. There were 108 courses available at Mooresville and an additional ten classes offered at Ben Davis High School through a vocational program.

The corporation purchased 17 additional computers, and Mr. Robert Grosskreutz taught a special class of teachers how to use them.

The students and faculty of MHS proved their dedication to the school and its reputation by once again earning a North Central accreditation from the North Central Evaluation Association. The Association was founded in 1895 and it re-evaluates schools every seven years. It has long maintained a tradition of excellence among schools that lets "Real Class" show through.

Math, Science emphasize future

Mooresville had an increase in enrollment in both math and science during the 1982-83 school year. Mr. Hubert Alexander, head of the Science Department, said, "They (students) are starting to realize that math and science are needed for acceptance into many colleges."

There were several examples of the emphasis the community and the school began to place on computer study. The corporation purchased nine additional computers and a printer, and the Math Department began to make plans for all freshmen to take a three-week computer literacy course. Math Department chairman Robert Grosskreutz said, "Students are beginning to see that computers are going to be the wave of the future." In fact, two adult computer education classes and two summer school classes in computer were filled before the classes were even advertised. Grosskreutz said it was particularly interesting that the classes filled without advertising and wondered what kind of enrollment would have resulted with advertising.

Teachers began to prepare for the computer wave in education as well. Some took additional university courses and many, elementary through high school, completed a course provided by the corporation.

Student interest was also obvious due to the fact that they only had to take one year of math to meet graduation requirements, yet over 60% of the student took more than one year.

Senior math whiz Kenny Kouns was confident about the math background he had received at MHS. "They (Mooresville math teachers) teach it to you instead of telling it to you," he said.

Both the Math and Science Departments continued to stress a curriculum that would give students a background that would prepare them for both practical use of math and science and university training in any of the math or science areas. Emphasis was always made to make students learn to think for themselves.

Languages stress communication

The English department continued to stress the fundamentals of English and to expand students' minds with the study of many literary works. In addition to the basic grammar and literature classes, classes in journalism, composition, Latin and Greek derivatives, and communications were offered.

Communications class was a major new addition to the department. Formerly speech class, the course was redefined to "open the course of study" to students. "There are different forms of communication in society," said communications teacher Mrs. Claudia Evans. "Speech isn't used as much as it used to be, and we're trying to build up intrapersonal communication."

Several large-scale projects were carried out by the classes. An hour television news production, a play for the children of the town, and a slide show-music combination were the "really big jobs." Also, the students made up their own newspapers and they shared their experiences with pen-pals at Miller's Merry Manor. Evans felt the students did an "excellent" job on the projects. Enrollment increased from ten students per class during first semester to around 25 per class second semester.

Any college-bound student should have at least one class in communications or speech," concluded Evans.

Even a kid who is planning on working after graduation needs these skills for things like job interviews throughout his life."

Foreign languages remained a preparatory curriculum for college-bound students. Spanish, French, and German attracted around 27 percent of the student body at MHS, compared to the 20 percent average of Indiana schools. "Several schools near here study and use our teaching methods in foreign languages," said Mrs. Mary Lee Boyd, department chairman. "I feel that this indicates we do a pretty good job of teaching foreign languages to students."

Language teachers used a variety of activities including summer trips to Europe as incentives to learn the languages.

Business, industrial arts update

Several classes in different departments had the similar goal of teaching students about the world of work through a combination of study and practical experience. The students still had books, homework, and tests, but they also had job assignments and in some cases, like the business intensive lab, they had a simulated office experience at school and actual on-the-job experience at some companies or businesses in the Mooresville area.

Intensive business lab teacher Stan Hall explained, "Basically, we are here to prepare students for business occupations, rather than college, but some like to take typing or shorthand to help them while they're in college."

Industrial arts teacher Wayne Johnson emphasized the importance of this kind of education for both boys and girls. Classes in industrial arts included metal working, graphic arts, electricity, wood working, and drafting.

Objectives for the department stressed knowledge about man's relationship with industry and technology, the development of leisure activities; the ability to do basic repair work; and learning safe operations of tools and machines in addition to having pride in doing quality work. Johnson said all the objectives could be a vital part of a person's life since by learning the techniques of these skills, a student could further educate himself in other ways.

Because companies were making changes in technology in 1983, the business lab also had to update so that students would be prepared for potential job openings. Hall said the department was making some major changes and planned to have a word-processing program by 1984.

Many business students received practical experience in the business community since some employers contacted the school when they had job openings. The department conducted a survey to determine its students' job stability. It found that at least 50 percent of the business students who were employed at graduation had stayed with the company that had hired them initially.

One-semester classes are eventful

Driver's education in '83 was more than just parallel parking and learning the right of way. Cancellation of Driver's ed. as an accredited course was considered on the state level. This was prompted by the fact that many insurance companies were beginning to feel that driver's education programs simply did not turn out better drivers; and therefore, many schools had already stopped giving credit for the classes. This caused the fees to skyrocket as students had to pay not only for materials, but the teacher's salary as well.

In a community like ours where both people work just to make ends meet, it's just not feasible to pay that much," said Mr. John Riley. "I think the administration realizes this ... Mooresville would probably be the last place to stop giving credit."

Driver's Ed. was a unique class, as students got practical driving experience during school time. The class was divided into two segments: one in which students did their driving and a classroom phase to teach driving rules.

Health was a one semester class required of all sophomores. The class, basically designed to educate students about the body and how it works, was a little bit more in '83.

Once each semester members of the Brown Township volunteer fire department visited the health classes to show students their emergency equipment and its uses.

Also during the first-aid segment of the course, students learned life-saving techniques such as the Heimlich maneuver, and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, which they were allowed to practice on a dummy from the town's fire department.

Physical education was a one semester course which taught and emphasized good physical condition. The course, which was on the alternate semester schedule for sophomores and freshmen, was loaded with activities. During the warmer months, students played softball and tennis; and during the winter they participated in gymnastics, volleyball, and modern dance.

Social studies remains "left out"

In the spring of 1983, the state legislature passed a bill that increased the amount of English, math, and science a student had to take to graduate. What about social studies? Mr. Don Adams, Social Studies Department head, said, "I think we are approaching an era that is of vital concern to the citizens of this state. The state recently increased graduation requirements for English, math, and science. If training in these areas comes at the expense of the students' social studies training, I believe that we are making a serious error."

Through 1983, three years of social studies classes were required. Civics, U.S. history, government, and economics had to be taken to graduate. As to whether social studies should be required, one senior said, "Yes. People need to be educated about the government. They complain but don't know what they're talking about."

Aside from classwork, field trips added a change to the routine of school, and the field trip to Chicago was a highlight of the year for some economics classes. A senior said of Chicago, "It broke the hum-drum of school. It gives students who never get the chance to get out of Mooresville a chance to see the big world."

For psychology classes, Mrs. Clarissa Snapp and her students visited Central State Hospital and Noble I, an institution for the handicapped. Mrs. Snapp and her government classes traveled to the U.S. House where they visited the governor's office and the Supreme Court. These and other field trips seemed to benefit the students. Mrs. Snapp said, "Students were able to take what they've learned about and see it," Mr. Adams said, "I think they are an excellent tool to use in bringing about awareness. They can be used to stimulate the students immensely by stimulating their curiosity."

Mr. Adams summed up the purpose of social studies: "The ultimate goal (of social studies) is to provide the student with the knowledge and skills they need in order to become productive citizens."

The Arts receive recognition

The arts were top priority classes for many students since they provided a change of pace from the regular class schedule and gave the students an opportunity to express talent in areas of music and art.

Band was not only an outside activity it was considered a class. Members were graded individually, not as a group. Grades were based upon: 1: responsibility, such as practices; 2: assignments; 3: attendance at performances; 4: ability. Director Gerald Weber's goal was for the members to have good positive experiences.

Practice for the marching season started in the summer. The band attended band camp at Manchester College to have intense practice prior to the first marching contest of the season. The band received a 76 at Bush Stadium, and they also won the sweepstakes trophy. At solo contest twelve members in Division I received first division ratings, and at state contest eleven members received Division I ratings.

The Art Department was headed by Mr. Dennis Amrhein and assisted by Mrs. Cathy Starnes. Various art classes were offered to expose students to all kinds of media. A student had to complete a year of basic art before he could take classes in drawing & painting, ceramics, jewelry, design, and printmak-

ing. Some students took an independent art class. Those students had to write a contract on what projects they would complete for the semester to receive credit.

Some students expanded their art beyond class by attending Saturday school at John Herron School of Art, taking private lessons, or working on sets for the drama productions.

Art students got the chance to receive recognition for their talent at various contests and art shows including the Scholastic Art Fair sponsored by Ayres, the local Tri Kappa Art Show, and the school's first public art show.

Vocational classes develop skills

Vocational classes had been a part of the Mooresville High School curriculum since its first year when agriculture and home economics were offered.

The emphasis for vocational classes was increased throughout the 1970's and 80's.

In 1974, federal funds provided money for additional vocational classes for schools willing to share the costly facilities and provide transportation for students to attend. Mooresville joined with ten other schools for such a program based at Ben Davis High School. The new program allowed students who were willing to leave the high school at 7:00 a.m. each morning the opportunity to go to Ben Davis and take classes in auto body repair, computer programming, food services, heating and air conditioning, health occupations, horticulture television technology, or construction trades.

Mooresville offered additional courses in business vocations, auto mechanics, woods, and metals. Auto II, an advanced mechanics class scheduled in a two-hour time block was offered for the first time, and it was granted $32,000 to update some of its facilities.

I.C.E. teacher Larry Goldsberry described Interdisciplinary Cooperative Education as an on-the-job training program that helped build job entry for different levels of skills. In addition to meeting as a class one period each day, members of the I.C.E. program receive credit for jobs they worked during lease time from the high school.

A business intensive lab offered students a similar practical experience. The lab included a simulation experience with mock companies allowing six seniors selected for the advanced business program the opportunity to use their business skills in lifelike situations. Business lab students, like I.C.E. students, also used their expertise in some local businesses as apprentices.

All of the vocational classes emphasized learning by doing as they gave students the varied experiences

Frontier 1983

Magazine

While traditional activities, events, and organizations continued at Mooresville High School throughout 1983, there were aspects of the year that made it and its students and faculty unique from all the years that preceded.

"Frontier 83" is a magazine section that features the people, entertainment, fashions, creativity, and world, national, and local events that affected the thoughts, actions, and ambitions of Mooresville High School students in 1983.

Certainly all of the items in this section were a major factor in the outcome of the year, but the most important ingredient was the people, for they were the ones who displayed "Real Class."

As expected of royalty, Prince Charles and William gave their best angles to photographers

A fairytale kind of existence kept Princess Grace of Monaco in the spotlight

The space shuttle Challenger roars into space from Cape Canaveral on its maiden flight

Barney Clark was in stable condition after the transplant of his Jarvik-7 artificial heart

Barney Clark receives first artificial heart

Births, tragedies make headlines

Who could forget World Wars I and II with Hitler, the attack on Pearl Harbor, the effects of the first atomic bomb or the Kennedy assassinations, the first step on the moon by Neil Armstrong, the Vietnam War, the Watergate scandal, and the elaborate Royal Wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana. These events will always be a part of history and many more memorable moments will continue to be added.

There were several historically important events in 1983. Once again the Royal Couple captured the hearts of many with the addition of Baby William. He was christened His Royal Highness Prince William Arthur Philip Louis of Wales. All of England welcomed their future king.

While England celebrated

William's birth, Monaco mourned the loss of the beloved Princess Grace. The story of Princess Grace was a fairytale come true. She was a successful Hollywood actress when she met and married Prince Rainier of Monaco. Many wept as the fairytale ended in a tragic automobile accident.

The tears began to fade as technology took the spotlight. Barney Clark volunteered to be the first artificial heart recipient. The Jarvik-7 plastic heart was implanted in Clark by Dr. William De Vries, chief surgeon at the University of Utah Medical Center. Clark was predicted to live only a few hours, but he exceeded all expectations by living for 111 days, 17 hours and 53 minutes. Barney Clark's contribution to the medical field was tremendous, and it enabled doctors to learn more about how the heart would operate in a human. More technology was introduced as the second space-shuttle, the Challenger made its first flight. The four astronauts on board were outfitted in two million dollar space suits which enabled them to function outside the space craft in a space-walk type of situation. The space program continued its research with the hope that soon they would have more space-shuttles making trips on a routine schedule.

The Reagan administration struggled with a variety of foreign and domestic issues throughout the year including an unemployment problem as high as 13 percent in some parts of the country, a shake-up in the Environmental Protection Agency, and a continuing debate concerning the nuclear arms race.

Despite such issues, the National Football League made headlines throughout the fall of 1982 when players struck for a higher percentage of profits. The result was a shortened season and a deal of frustration throughout the sport.

Professional football made more headlines with the resignation of the United States Football League. The USFL's hope was to capture the market for football, basketball, and baseball during the spring and summer months. Heisman trophy winner, Herschel Walker, forfeited his senior year at Georgia State so he could join the USFL. He signed with the New York Jets for 16.5 million dollars over a three year period.

I.U. breaks out

What could it have been that caused grown college students to have a fever and break out in a rash, not to mention miss classes? It was that supposedly extinct childhood disease — measles, otherwise known as "old-fashioned measles." The disease first invaded the campus of Indiana University. It quickly spread to the Purdue University campus; then, it was on its way to Florida! All the eyes of the nation turned to I.U.'s measles epidemic while the students of I.U. turned to Florida for Spring Break.

Florida was prepared for the invasion of unimmunized

I.U. students. The more popular beaches were equipped with shot stations ready and willing to shoot any unimmunized person. It was up to the shot stations to insure the residents of Florida that Indiana's epidemic would not affect them.

The measles epidemic even affected the students of MHS. The traditional research paper pilgrimage to the I.U. library was cancelled to avoid any unnecessary risks. Shots were given free of charge to any person not fully immunized. In total, Mooresville Consolidated School Corporation gave 257 measles shots.

Sports are tops

"Lights, camera, action!" The Mooresville High School Baseball League was provided with "light" in 1983. Towards the end of the school year, lights were installed at the high school baseball diamond. Opening game was April 28, 1983. The new lights were not only provided by the school corporation, but also by the community. Donations from businesses and individuals contributed to the cost. The baseball team also had a pizza sale to help with the payment. The lights not only provided better experience for the players, but also lowered the limited facility problem.

Summer is known as a break in activities for some, but most people would disagree. During the summer of 1982, over 300 girls participated in the Mooresville Softball League. In the past most girls did not even think about playing softball. Now things had changed; the league had become a main event. The league started off the season with a jamboree. Regular season lasted about two months. To sum up the season, the league held an invitational tournament. Businesses of Mooresville sponsored teams of the league, by providing uniforms.

Businesses, patrons donate money, time, enthusiasm to school Community shares school spirit

The school and community continued to share many interests in 1983.

The Old Settlers Picnic remained a tradition for many groups that planned its events for months. The three-day celebration was kicked off with a parade featuring the high school band, queen candidates, and many trucks, cars, and floats decorated by community organizations. Many groups used the site of the picnic as an opportunity to raise money for their particular projects.

The Old Settlers Queen was determined by the amount of money the candidates were able to raise for Kappa Kappa Sigma's philanthropic projects. The winner was high school junior, Debbie Wineley, who raised over $1800 by sponsoring car washes, bake sales, and dinners.

In addition to the hundreds of dollars organizations raised to give as scholarships to workshops and colleges, Tri Kappa and the White Lick Art League sponsored art shows for both professional and amateur works.

The Community showed a particular interest in supporting the band.

The band went to Washington, D.C. for a band contest. That trip would probably not have been possible without the help of certain groups. A sign was placed beside the police station which recognized those who contributed to the fundraiser for new uniforms.

The community was very active throughout the year. The organizations pulled together to represent the community's togetherness and style. Class was not only displayed throughout each organization, but also it described the Community of Mooresville.

Accessories excite '83 fashions

As the faces of Mooresville High School changed in '83, so did the fashions and fads. Many of the styles of '82 remained, but many exited and still others made their entrance.

Designer jeans began to "fade," though not completely, from the halls of MHS, and they were gradually replaced by various other brands of jeans in all lengths and "tightnesses." While some preferred the baggy jean, others opted for the standard five-pocket, slim-fitting style. Pin-striped jeans entered the school midway through '83 and cropped pants were displayed by a few individuals.

The new jean styles were frequently accented by accessories. Often a comfortable oxford shirt was teamed with a bandana of coordinating color or a polo worn under it to add an "extra touch." For girls, legwarmers worn over jeans during the colder months remained stylish.

The Izod alligator continued to surface on polos and sweaters, and the Ralph Lauren logo began to appear on clothes of the wealthier students. In general, sweaters and polos of most all styles and colors remained a favorite among the students at MHS.

Bright colors, mini skirts, fanny warmer sweatshirts, colored leotards, and colored flats were all popularized by Valley Girl fanatics. They also began "a, like, totally tubular new language!"

For the feet, duck shoes were worn by the young ladies as were flats, both casual and dressy. Leather boots of western styling and heels of various heights continued to be popular, and the low-heeled ankle boots of suede or smooth leather entered the school.

New Wave hairstyles, which were extremely short on top (so short they stood straight up!) and shoulder length in the back, surfaced on a few individuals, especially some guys.

The double and triple pierced ears, introduced in 1982, became very popular among the girls in '83. Leaf earrings were often worn with various outfits.

Whether a person preferred dressing up or down, there was an outfit for everyone's personality or lifestyle.

Vals are 'awesome'

The San Fernando Valley was the birthplace of the "like totally rad" language and dress of the "awesome" Valley Girl.

Moon Unit Zappa first introduced the Valley Girl craze by recording a single titled "Valley Girls." The trend invaded MHS during '83. Although the language and clothes were very different, many of the girls altered their appearance and language for the sake of becoming a Val Gal, "fer sure, fer sure."

To achieve the proper Valley Girl look, a dedicated Val spent countless hours shopping for clothes and makeup. The key to Val dressing was "cute." Besides the usual clothes, the Valley Girl essentials included feathered haircuts, heavy makeup, and manicured nails.

The easiest way to recognize a Val was by her distinctive vocabulary. The following was some Val Gal vocabulary:

Fer sure: Really, for sure

Grody to the max: Totally disgusting

Totally: In every way

Barf me out: That's disgusting

Tubular: Like awesome

Awesome: Like tubular

Ohmigahd: I can't believe it (good)

Gag me with a spoon: I can't believe it (bad)

No outfit was complete without the proper shoes. Displayed are some of the more popular casual styles.

Some are 'best'

MHS students said honesty, trust, and a sense of humor were the major ingredients for a best friend relationship. "A best friend should be a person who is easy to talk to, fun to be with, and shares common interests," said senior Kathy Fulkerson. "I can tell her what is on my mind and not have to worry about her telling anyone!"

When most people thought back on their high school days, some of their fondest memories were of the times they shared with their best friend. A best friend was that very special person who shared the good times as well as the bad. He was always there when you needed him.

"I wouldn't trade my best friend for anything in the entire world," said one senior

"She's very special to me!"

Though many friendships passed with time, some remained best friends for years, some even since grade school. They were the two or three people that were rarely seen one without the other.

An important quality of a best friend was the ability to cheer up his companion when times were bad. A best friend always made one laugh. "I like someone with a sense of humor who doesn't let things get her down," said Senior Annette Schoenfelder.

A true best friend cannot be replaced. "I think everyone should have a best friend!" said junior Shelley Plank.

To support his goal, Mr. Constable sacks groceries and stocks shelves at IGA.

Spraying plants at Bud and Bloom keeps junior Carole Flynn busy.

Senior Dan Trusty keeps Gray's serving line moving with a clean supply of plates.

Fast food restaurants employ many students including Hardee's co-worker Kim Parrott.

Students work for 'cash' Jobs are 'work'

Two Big Macs and a large fry, please!" "Do you have anything in the way of . . . ?" These phrases, and many more like them, were heard each day by a majority of the working students at MHS.

Hardees, McDonalds, Dairy Queen, Grays, and numerous other businesses provided many students with part-time jobs. The jobs ranged from fast-food cooks to sales clerks.

Some students found that working was necessary to cover their expenses. "I hate work sometimes, but the money's worth it," said junior Julie Gajkerowicz.

Although most of the students' jobs did not provide them with extremely high wages, the job did allow them to earn enough cash to cover their extra wants and to help them gain working experience for later years. Those extra wants included cars, clothes, gas, activities, and savings for college.

Students working through the ICE or Ben Davis programs gained valuable on-the-job training and experience in their prospective field.

'83 movies vary

1982-83 was a fantastic year for the movie business. While bad economic times plagued most of the nation, people turned to inexpensive forms of entertainment. Movie industry profit records were shattered.

The biggest name in films that season was not an actor but a producer. Steven Spielberg, who had teamed up with George ("Star Wars") Lucas the year before to make the action-adventure film, "Raiders of the Lost Ark," had two highly successful movies in '82-'83, "Poltergeist" and "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial."

With such past block-buster films as "Jaws," "Close Encounters of a Third Kind," and "Raiders," Spielberg became responsible for an unprecedented four of the top ten highest grossing films of all time.

"Poltergeist"

This film, though financially very successful, was mostly over-shadowed by the enormous popularity of "E.T." It tells the story of the Freeling family, whose household is turned upside-down by a poltergeist, which communicates to the younger daughter through the family television set. Director Tobe Hooper ("The Texas Chainsaw Massacre") added startling special effects for a few spine tingles.

"E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial"

"E.T." centers around a little alien who is accidentally left on Earth. He is befriended by a small boy who protects him from the evil grown-ups, including the FBI. "E.T." is different from most sci-fis. E.T. isn't huge, mean, laser-wielding, or intent on destroying the Earth; he just wants to get home.

Everywhere signs of E.T.'s existence were in abundance. Every major store had its own special E.T. section, where anything with the little fel-

"Rocky III"

Everyone's favorite hero, The Italian Stallion, returned for what MGM-UA billed as "The Greatest Challenge" pitting Rocky (Sylvester Stallone) against big, mean Clubber Lang (Mr. T). This film brought to a close the highly successful and highly acclaimed "Rocky" trilogy. Stallone wrote, directed, and starred in all three films.

"Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan"

It was the year for sequels as Captain Kirk (William Shatner), Spock (Leonard Nimoy), and the rest of the crew of the "Enterprise" return in a highly successful, exciting follow-up to a lukewarm movie. Also starred is Ricardo Montalban (better known for his role of Mr. Rourke on television's "Fantasy Island") as the evil Khan whom Kirk exiled in an episode from the original "Star Trek" T.V. series.

"Tootsie"

An uproarious success, "Tootsie" stars Dustin Hoffman as an out-of-work actor who in a desperate last-ditch effort auditions for a female part in a daytime soap opera. Bill Murray (of T.V.'s "Saturday Night Live" and star of "Stripes") plays Hoffman's roommate in an amusing supporting role. Jessica Lang was critically hailed for her part in the film, which helped convince critics (who slashed her role of Dawn in the remake of "King Kong" to bits) that she was a quality actress.

"Annie"

Based on a Broadway hit play, based on an old comic strip ("Little Orphan Annie"), this mainly cheerful musical also tugs at the heartstrings. The story depicts the adventures of a curly red-headed orphan (Aileen Quinn) and her dog Sandy (who in the original comic strip said nothing except "Arf") in the big city. Many people acclaimed Carol Burnett's extremely humorous portrayal of Miss Hannigan, the drunken overseer of the orphanage.

"The Best Little Whorehouse In Texas"

Also based on a Broadway hit play, this hilarious musical stars macho-man Burt Reynolds, country-western star Dolly Parton (She had made her film debut the year before in Jane Fonda's "9 to 5") Dom DeLuise, and Jim Nabors (Many people remember him as Gomer Pyle). This film tells the tale of a certain house of ill-repute which turns the town upside-down with its fun-time atmosphere of dancing and singing. The story is loosely based on a real situation.

Others

The movie industry had to con $40,000 out of Daddy Warbucks in the movie "Annie" plenty of other hits such as "The Verdict" starring Paul Newman as a lawyer in what most critics described as his best and most powerful film, and "Ghandi", a three hour quality film feast tells of the man who brought India into the modern world. This film was first released with a limited week-long run which earned more than $300,000 in only twelve theaters. "Porky's," a hilarious, though very R-rated film about growing up in the 50's, set off a rash of 'growing up' movies. "Airplane II the Sequel," a sequel to the extremely popular nonsense comedy, "Airplane," takes place aboard a space-shuttle carrying passengers to the moon.

Midnight Movies

"The Movies at Midnight" continued to be very popular with MHS students. Many often flocked to see horror shows such as "Dawn of the Dead," which was billed as being so frightening it was banned in 36 countries.

Groups of students also travelled to see audience-participation or 'cult' films like "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," in which the audience has it's own lines, costumes, and actions in the film. It wasn't unusual for kids to see the film several times.

Transition plays on music of 83

1983 was a transitional year for the music industry. Many new groups flooded the airwaves with new sounds; and as they did, many old groups came back on the scene, some for the last time. A few brave individuals ventured from their groups to record solo albums. Almost every group needed a "video" for the songs to survive, and cable television brought the sounds and sights of music into the home for the first time.

New groups

The summer of '82 started as Survivor, a relatively unknown group, hit the top of the charts with the song "The Eye of the Tiger," the theme from the movie ROCKY III.

Joan Jett and The Blackhearts were next in line to gain fame with the hit "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" not long after they appeared in Indianapolis as warm-up band for The Police.

In the fall of 1982, Indiana's own John Cougar made the limelight with hit singles "Jack and Diane" and "Hurts So Good," which were both in the top ten for 1982. Cougar's album AMERICAN FOOL hovered at the top of the charts for several months and managed the number four spot for the year.

After Cougar's success, The Human League made it big with a cut titled "Don't You Want Me?"

The winter months of 1982 seemed to be dominated by the Australian group, Men At Work, whose hit singles included "Down Under," "Be Good Johnny," and "Who Can It Be Now?"

The spring was invaded by the British group Dexy's Midnight Runners and the hit, "Come On Eileen." The song was typical of the "mellow," easy-going sounds coming from Europe and Australia.

On the home front, Def Leppard's "Photograph" made the charts with its American "heavy metal" sound.

Billy Squier's appearance at Market Square Arena on April 2, 1983, was a sell out.

Old groups, new songs

Many old groups kept right on going by turning out many sometimes successful hits. The J. Geils Band did well with the release "Centerfold." Daryl Hall and John Oats kept in the thick of things with the album H<sub>2</sub>O and the hit single "Man-eater."

Van Halen's DIVER DOWN with its reproduction of the old Mammas and Pappas song "Dancin' in the Streets" did well on the charts. Styx's KILLROY WAS HERE, Pink Floyd's THE FINAL CUT, Foreigner's 4, and Journey's Escape were just a few of the other new releases by old bands.

Supertramp's FAMOUS LAST WORDS had a special connotation after the announcement in May, 1983 that Roger Hodgson was leaving the group after a world tour.

The Who and The Doobie Brothers also made final appearances as groups, and after successful solo albums by Don Henley and Glenn Frey, members of the Eagles decided to go their separate ways.

One group that gained fame in the Mid-1970's tried to perform a comeback. Kiss, after losing Ace Frehley and Peter Criss, attempted to return by releasing a new album and going on tour.

Concerts

Neil Diamond pleased people of all ages at both of his concerts at Market Square Arena during the summer of 1982. The first concert sold out in less than four hours, and his second concert was sold out in less than one day.

REO Speedwagon was chosen for the "best concert" and the "best group of 1982" by a poll of MHS students.

John Hall and Darryl Oats also "wowed-em" at MSA. Billy Squier and special guest Def Leppard put on a "stroke" of a show, but Def Leppard seemed to be more of a main attraction as implied by the crowd and the fact that it was their last warm-up band appearance. Bob Seeger rounded out the year of concerts with two sell-out shows. Music 45

the era of prime time soap operas

Soap operas, cable TV, school activities are priorities Students choose spare time carefully

As busy as most people were in 1983, who had any spare time? With many students involved, not only in school but with extracurricular activities and work, when did they have any spare time? Better yet, when they did have a few extra moments, what did they do with them?

Most students took care of the basic needs first: eating and sleeping. But, when there was enough of these, most students put their spare time to good use.

Among some of the more important activities were shopping, dating, and watching television. Many high school students were addicted to soap operas, not only late afternoon daytime dramas but the newer trend, evening soaps like "Dallas," "Falcon Crest," and "Knot's Landing."

A new dimension was added to the television world as cable became available in most areas around Mooresville. Cable consisted of a wide variety of programming including HBO (Home Box Office), Showtime, and MTV (Music-Television). Of course, cable wasn't free; the cost depended upon programming. HBO and Showtime were similar. They both featured first-run movies in the privacy of the home. There was also a sports network which constantly ran various sports. MTV was the favorite of many students. It featured concerts with video. To singles turned into video "the shows" as the songs came increasingly popular with teenagers. Students were television freaks but cable were even worse after arrival. With so many options, they had to choose precious free time even carefully.

Computers invade the world, MHS

The one word that might have best described 1983 was computer. TIME magazine named the computer as its "Man of the Year" at the close of 1982, and its popularity continued to grow.

The media hyped the importance of computers as some sources predicted that 85 percent of all jobs would be computer-related by the end of the 1980's. Such coverage created a demand for the computer industry that compared to television production in the 1950's.

Education was no exception. Indiana's Department of Public Instruction passed a requirement that all schools add computer literacy courses to the curricula, and nearly every department in the high school began to explore ways computers could either aid education or be installed to teach computer literacy.

The Guidance Department had already initiated the use of computers to help students with career choices and financial aid, and the Math Department had offered a computer course since 1981, but the

Math Department increased its number of computers and publications, industrial arts and business began to explore the use of computers in areas

Athletics: competition with "class"

At Mooresville High School athletics played an important part in the overall personality of the school. Nearly everyone got involved with athletics in one way or another. For those who were members of a team, athletics provided challenges and excitement. That same excitement was felt by the crowds who supported their teams.

Hours of hard work went into the practices in an effort to produce the "perfect" team. A coach's dream of an undefeated season materialized for girls' basketball coach Joe Johnson and gymnastics coach Kathy Christian Bothwell.

"The thrill of victory and the agony of defeat" was felt by every member of every team as they all had ups and downs.

Fans endured all types of inclement weather conditions to make it to the games and back their team to a victory.

The time that went into athletics produced a kind of "real class" that was reflected in both the school and the community.

The young group compiled a 5-5 record. They would have liked having a winning season and to have won the conference, but they did accomplish a goal to improve and gain experience every game. "Regardless if you win or lose, if you get something from it, it's successful," said

Dale Copeland, Chris Lemon, and Kip Davis were selected but evolved into captains, leading the team throughout the year.

Most valuable player was Chris Lemon; most improved player was Kip Davis. Named to the all-conference team were Dale Copeland, Chris Lemon, Kip Davis, Dan Hopkins, and Van Reed.

"It was basically a learning experience, both for the players and the coaching staff," said senior co-captain Susan Kellum, "as far as the record goes it was not the best, but I think that we had a lot of fun."

The volleyball program saw many changes in 1982 as Miss Kathy Christian took over Miss Rosanna Mur-dock's head coaching job; and Mrs. Cathy Wolfe, in her first year at MHS, became the assistant varsity coach.

The team showed excitement and enthusiasm throughout an unusually tough season. "Sometimes Miss Christian would get really excited and leave things at home or in the storage room," said junior Risa Fox. The team members and the fans also shared in the enthusiasm and excitement as was evident in the size of the crowds. "We would always have a great crowd that would back us all the way," said sophomore Kris Strohmeyer.

Much effort was put into the program this year. The teams practiced every day after school and many many times came into school at 7:00 o'clock in the morning for serving practice. But the team could not overcome its main difficulty, lack of experience.

The young team had two seniors and two juniors and finished the season in the Mid State Conference standings with a season record of 5-11 and a conference record of 2-5. Susan Kellum, who was one of only five to be named to the all-conference team and was named F.C.A. athlete of the year, summed up her final year of volleyball at MHS by saying, "I think as the season went along we became a stronger team . . . It was a good year."

The team ended its season with a 10-8 record. Coach Peters felt good about the record. He said, "The wins represent wins against good teams; the losses against very good teams."

There were five seniors on the varsity team. One of the seniors was an exchange student from Switzerland, Eric Nagels. Eric proved to be a very steady and solid competitor. He ended his season with a 17-1 record. "Eric was a team inspiration to our team and gave the guys a chance to see real talent close-up," said senior teammate Doug Hastings.

Senior Jeff Berg ended his number one singles position with an 11-14 record, and the number one doubles team of seniors Doug Hastings and Randy Sokol ended the season with a 15-10 record.

Number three singles Brian Carpenter said, "I would have liked to have won sectionals, but I guess that's all part of growing up. Other than that, we had the best year an MHS tennis team has ever had. We were the only team to end the season ranked in the state, 22nd!"

Cross Country provides unique challenge

Girls, boys endure distances

A strong desire to work hard in practice and continue to improve brought much success to the girls cross country team as it finished a great season with a record of five wins and two losses. The team's only losses were to North Vermillion and Center Grove, ranked 17th and 8th in the state respectively. The close scores of these meets proved to the girls that they could run with the best of teams.

The Mid-State meet exemplified the team's depth as the girls overcame injuries to win the conference championship.

"Our team was successful because there was a special closeness between all of us."

---

The team qualified for regional competition by placing third in the sectional, one point from second. Other team accomplishments included a second place finish at the Ritter Invitational, fifth place at the Golden Spike Invitational, and eleventh at regionals.

Junior Jenny Bauer's good attitude, consistency and superior running ability made her the team leader. Bauer, the team's MVP, placed fourth in the conference meet, and seventh at sectionals. Junior Beth Yates was named the "most improved runner."

Depth was a dominant factor that aided to much of the team's success. Although many runners were new to the sport, this was never evident. Another important characteristic of the team was its togetherness. "We were always pulling for each other," said Beth Yates. Jenny Bauer summed it up by saying, "Our team was successful because there was a special closeness between all of us. Everyone realized that cross country takes a total team effort, and each girl contributed her part to the team without any questions asked."

Looking back, Coach Dale Graves said this was "the most enjoyable team I've ever worked with."

Personal dedication and hard work were main factors in the success of the boys cross country team as it finished the season with a dual meet record of four wins, two losses. The boys were also the Edgewood Invitational champions and Morgan County champions, while placing second in the Mid-State Conference meet, third in sectional competition, and ninth in regionals. The team goal of being very competitive was clearly accomplished.

Leading the team were junior Greg Redding and senior Jeff Campbell. Redding, the team's MVP, had the fastest time of the season with 16:49 and was an All-Conference selection. Campbell was named the team's most improved player after coming back from a serious injury and named All-Conference and All-Sectional.

Despite low public recognition, cross country runners tackle miles of road work a day. Some people wonder why anyone would want to go through the hard workouts that these runners do. Jeff Campbell said, "I wanted to do something that would give me a feeling of personal accomplishment."

"When everything is over, well and the race is over, I get a tremendous feeling of satisfaction that makes hard practices seem worthwhile," said Gregg Redding.

One characteristic of the team that truly made "team" was the high level of competitive unity. Coach Graves spoke of the team as a group that thrived on friendship, but was highly competitive against each other when the time came.

Young teams have fun, work toward varsity positions

Tennis leads other fall reserves

Volleyball

After losing the first three matches of the 1982 season, the MHS Reserve Volleyball Team bounced back and trounced the next three opponents.

Although the team was made up mostly of freshmen, the members played at a level many felt was of a varsity team.

The "totally awesome" (as sophomore team member Valerie Grubb often said on the daily morning announcements) reserve team finished its season with an impressive 9-6 record, greatly improving on the previous year's 4-12 record.

Tennis

"We had lots of fun, but we learned a lot too," said sophomore Tom Stewart.

The 1982 Reserve Tennis Team ended its season with an 8-6 record, and received second place in the reserve tourney held at MHS.

Number one singles player Dave Durochik ended his victorious season with a 12-1 record. Coach Peters said that prospects looked good for next year. "Those who want those positions on the varsity team the most, will work the hardest to claim them," he said.

Frosh Football

"Our first job is that people get experience playing football and knowledge of fundamentals," said freshman football coach Steve Hilligoss.

Although the number of players was small and injuries plagued the team, Coach Hilligoss said, "Our season was successful. We learned the fundamentals. The more we played, the fewer mistakes we made."

Team unity was a big factor in being successful. Hilligoss added, "If you don't have a team that gets along well, you can win, but you don't have any fun."

Co-captains for the 3-6 team were Scott McDaniel and Steve Johnson.

Reserve Football

"This bunch of kids is really great!" complimented Rex Cook, reserve football coach.

The team would practice varsity and practice against varsity players. The boys' 7-3 record shows their hard work. "This team didn't have any stars. They had fantastic unity and played consistently as one unit," added Cook.

The team lost playing time when a few teams cancelled but picked up some in their place. The team played Plainfield twice. They lost the first game but rolled over the Quakers the second time 51-13 for a big victory.

"I really felt good about this year's reserve team," said Cook. "Everyone did his own job with no complaining."

Best record in seventeen years

Boys sweep Mid-State!

The boys varsity basketball team finished the season with one of the best records ever achieved by a Mooresville team. It was the best in the last 17 years, and it was the best start, 11 in a row, in 28 years. The team started strong, outscoring several teams by 20 or more points, and received mentions in the AP and UPI Top Twenty. However, they ran into tough competition through the last fourth of the season, losing four of their last five games. Not a tall team, they were often forced to guard players several inches taller. "I tried to be realistic about the season," said Coach Joe Stanley. "We had no 6'6" players, so that made it hard to compete with bigger teams."

Several major accomplishments were reached during the season. The team captured the Mid-State Conference Championship with a 7-0 record, and Coach Stanley won his 300th game as a coach in the 9th game against Brownsburg. "I couldn't have had it with a better bunch of guys," said Stanley of the 55-54 win over the Bulldogs.

The team often had bursts of good play in games that Stanley called "some of the best ball we played all year." The Pioneers also won several "down to the wire" victories. A last second layup through heavy traffic by Chris Lemon won the Brownsburg game. A three-point play by Gary Elmore and a missed free-throw by a Franklin player in the last ten seconds of that game pulled the Pioneers through. Missed free-throws won for Mooresville at Edgewood, but Danville was able to connect at the end to add another loss to the Pioneer record.

Team closeness also proved a factor. Said Chris Lemon, "We weren't close at first, but as the season grew, we worked better together." Coach Stanley also talked about the teamwork of his players. "It was a good feeling watching the boys grow up over the years. They really worked well together." Leading in scoring and assists was Chris Lemon, and Tom Wright had the most rebounds. Starters Lemon, Wright, Brian Davidson and injury-hampered Doug Hastings were the four seniors on the team, who offered a lot of experience.

Things didn't go as well as the Pioneers would have liked toward the end of the season. They lost their last three games of the season, the third of which was the sectional game. Mooresville drew a bye in the first round, but the semi-final game was enough to send them home.

"It was a great feeling going through the season with them."

At sectionals, they faced

Brownsburg again. In the previous years at sectionals, Mooresville had lost several times by one point in a tourney to the Bulldogs. Fortunately, that looming victory couldn't be broken. The Pioneers again fell to Brownsburg. In an ironic finish, a last second shot saved Brownsburg just as they had saved the Pioneers earlier. A jump ball with one second on the clock was controlled by a Brownsburg player, who put in at the buzzer to send the game into overtime. In overtime, a Bulldog hit a shot with three seconds left to break the 50-50 tie and win the game.

Though Stanley said he was a little "disappointed" in the finish, he was still proud of his team. "These kids gave a lot to the community, any team has," he said of the players. "It was a great feeling going through the season with them."

Team unity is most important success factor

'Ladies make 'Sweet Sixteen'

"This season has been my most enjoyable because of our team attitude and togetherness. I was very pleased with not just our winning record, but how the girls worked each day in practice and how they helped each other," said Coach Joe Johnson about his 1983 Lady Pioneer basketball team.

The girls completed the school's undefeated season in the sport with an 18-0 record and a total of 23 wins and 1

"He told us that we are ladies first . . . this makes the name 'Lady Pioneers' mean more"

loss. Also, they won their 3rd consecutive conference title and were the sectional and regional champs.

"Winning sectional and Mid-State were two of the goals we had at the start of the season," said senior Susan Kellum. "I had never been on a sectional championship team. We definitely waited long enough!"

The Pioneers dominated their opponents, averaging 61 points per game, compared to their opposition's 37. Leading scorer was Amy Strohmeyer with 10.5 points a game and leading rebounder was Carrie Henderson with 7.3 a game. Susan Kellum had the most assists and Kim Butrum led in steals.

Whenever a member of the team was asked about their success, team unity and attitude were always mentioned. "One of the reasons we played so well together as a team was the unselfish attitude of each player. No one was out there to be the star," Coach Johnson also praised the girls often. "Nearly every championship team has a closeness or a team-like attitude; this trait pulls them through the long season and success is much easier to come by," he said. Coach Johnson seemed to be the biggest influence on the girls. Said Susan, "He (Coach Johnson) told us that we are ladies first, then basketball players. I think this makes the name

"The season was so exciting. It truly was the best!"

Lady Pioneers' mean more.

Amy Strohmeyer and Susan Kellum, the team's only two seniors, were the co-captains. In addition to the team accomplishments, these two also earned a number of individual awards. Both were cited by the All-State pre-season teams, and Amy was chosen to try out for the All-State Tourney Team. "I was excited!" said Amy of her selection. "I didn't think I had a chance." Susan was named "FCA Athlete of the Year" for central Indiana and was selected as one of 15 girls to the Academic All-State team. "I feel deeply honored," reflected Susan. "This is one of those things that happens and you can't believe it's happening to you."

Team honors went to Amy Strohmeyer, MVP, and Dawn Alexander, most improved.

The team's greatest accomplishment was advancing to Semi-State competition before falling to Brebeuf, 47-42. It was the team's only loss of the season and didn't affect the good memories. Concluded Susan, "The whole season was all so exciting. It truly was the best!"

Although the final score of the game didn't indicate it, the contest was close down to the wire. Going into the fourth quarter, the game was tied, and the lead changed numerous times throughout the quarter. Mooresville lost the lead for the last time with 1:20 left in the game. Free throws proved to be the key to the game as Mooresville out-scored Brebeuf from the field but failed to capitalize on free-throws.

New coaches, new emphasis characterize wrestling team

Blessing advances to Semi-State

"This was a year for us to rebuild our team and improve for next year," said junior co-captain Jeff Sims. The team and coaches agreed it was a tough rebuilding season that ended with a dual meet record of 4-14.

The team placed fifth in the Mid-State Conference with two wrestlers capturing Mid-State championships. Jeff Sims placed first for the second year in a row, and senior Robert Williamson claimed his first Mid-State title.

The team was disappointed to only place fourth in sectional competition, but four individuals were able to advance to regional competition. Sectional winners were Eddie Caudill, 138 pound sophomore, Dave Blessing, 167 pound junior; and Jeff

"We can't talk about records, but the team will be better; it will be better."

Sims, 185 pound junior. Advancing as a runner-up was Robert Williamson, senior heavyweight.

Caudill and Sims were defeated in semi-final round, but both came back to place third. Williamson placed fourth.

Dave Blessing placed second at regionals to be Mooresville's only representative in the semi-state at Bloomington North.

Coach Silver admitted the year was challenging. "We had difficulties all year but emphasized character and good morals as well as wrestling moves," he said.

Junior co-captain Dave

Blessing added, "As a young team we had little experience but we pulled together to prepare for next year."

Gymnasts chalk up perfect season

Headlining the 1983 varsity gymnastics team and Mooresville's contribution to state competition, junior Kim Kieninger with her sixth place state all-around award made many Mooresvillians and fellow gymnasts proud of her accomplishments. Mrs. Kathy Christian Bothwell coached the team that was undefeated in regular season meets and advanced six gymnasts to sectionals. One of the team goals, to reach 100 points in a meet, was not achieved; however, the highest scoring meet, 92.95 against

Bloomington North, was a high point of the year

"The freshmen felt inferior, but everybody helped everybody."

After reaching regionals, Kieninger advanced to state "I worked hard on everything; but I improved most on the floor exercise," stated the "most valuable gymnast" whose best event this year was the floor exercise. Her favorite event was the uneven parallel bars because, it's a challenge."

Freshman Jane Allman was voted "most improved gymnast" for the year. Another freshman, Robin Manley, mentioned that, "the freshmen felt inferior," to their older teammates; but soon, "everybody helped everybody." This made for an all-around good team attitude. With her sights set on going to state, Kim's goal for the competition was "to place anywhere and get a medal." She set many records during the year. A 9.1 highest event score on floor exercise, being undefeated in all-around competition for the regular season, sectional and regional championships, regional all-around championship, 6th place on floor exercise at state, and 7th all-around at state were all credited to Kim's gymnastics career at MHS.

Boys add 'spark' to squad

Some people thought of cheerleading as an easy job, however, any cheerleader would have disagreed with this statement. Cheerleaders not only boosted school spirit at varsity meets, but they also sponsored nearly all of the pep sessions, decorated the halls with numerous signs and made "goodies" and meals for various teams.

Even though long hours were spent developing new and "perfecting" all cheers there was still time for enjoyment. "I enjoy being part of the team, which we are," said

"It's especially fun when we win."

In 1983 there was a welcome addition to the cheerleading squad — seven male cheerleaders! "I was all for it!" said senior Sonya Bishop. "They were great to work with!" The boys helped boost the school spirit and at the same time enabled the cheerleaders to build more impressive pyramids.

The cheerleaders' main goal was to get the fans involved. "I like getting the fans to cheer with us," said Misty Davee. "It really makes us feel good when they are helping us yell, and I know the boys can hear us."

Freshman A team wins Mid-State Conference basketball title New coaches guide frosh, reserve

Boys Reserve Basketball

Although the 1982-83 reserve basketball team struggled to a 6-14 record, Coach Jim Whitaker showed no disappointment in his players.

Reserve teams aren't necessarily there to win a lot of games," he said, "but rather to prepare the players for next year." He also said that several varsity level players were not out this year making it tough for the reserve team to have good depth. Leading the team in scoring was Jimmy Knight; top rebounders were Andy Mitchell, Terry Mork, and Marvin Jones.

Boys Freshman Basketball

The freshman basketball team added another winning season to the records with an overall record of 17 wins and 8 losses. The B team compiled an impressive 6-1 season, while the A team finished with an 11-7 record, including the Mid-State Conference Championship. Said Coach Dave Clark, "This has been a most enjoyable group to work with."

Winning the Mid-State crown was the team's goal for the season, and the willingness of the players was a factor in their success. "They weren't cocky," said Clark. "They knew how to listen and they were willing to learn."

Reserve Wrestling

The 1983 Reserve Wrestling Team ended its season with a dual meet record of 1-0-2.

Coaching the team for his first year was Mr. Brett Tabor, a former wrestler for arch rival Decatur Central. The team was young and had little experience but had some outstanding moments. At the Reserve Mid-State Conference, freshmen Craig Norton at 138 pounds, and David Schwartz at 145 pounds, placed first in their weight classes.

Aaron Acres at 126 pounds, and Robert Biddle at 155 pounds, placed second, Kevin Manuel at 132 pounds received a third, and Marvin Burris at 167 pounds, came in fourth.

First year wrestler Mike Crockett summed up the season: "Too much was expected out of us, and we had a lot of problems; but with more experience we'll get better."

Reserve Girls Basketball

"I was very happy with the dedication and drive to work hard in practice, and I feel that the hard work paid off for the kids," said Larry Goldsberry, coach of the 1983 girls reserve basketball team. "They conducted themselves as ladies even in the most trying and frustrating of situations and performed admirably to win several close games."

The girls ended their season with a 13-1 record. This was the best record in the history of girls reserve teams of MHS.

Freshman Girls Basketball

"Anyone who can run as much as I had them running and practice every Saturday morning at 7:00 and still have great attitudes towards basketball is fantastic!" said Coach Cathy Wolfe, describing her 1982-83 girls freshman basketball team.

The girls had a good season, losing only two games to Ben Davis in overtime and to South Wayne by one point.

Wolfe said, "They did pretty well. No one wants to lose, but the two losses were close!"

Pioneers win record 28 games; Silver collects 200 + wins

Baseball team wins 3rd regional

"I told the boys other teams thought they had the upper hand, but we can beat them . . . and we have."

"I told the boys that a lot of the other teams would think they had the upper hand," said varsity baseball coach Greg Silver of his players, "but if we worked we could beat them . . . and we have." The 1983 baseball team did defeat several supposedly "better" teams on its way to a 28-5 record. One of its biggest upsets was that of state ranked Lawrence North, a team Mooresville had never defeated. The Pioneers ended the regular season ranked 14th in the state

Though the 1983 team didn't come by wins easily according to Coach Silver, it made up for the lack of outright ability by hard work.

"This was a great group of kids," said Silver. "Their character and discipline made the difference between a great season and one that is so-so. They really understood us." The hard work paid off when the team accomplished a record 28 wins for the season. "Our seniors, my coaching staff, the captains and that 'character' was the key to our success," said Silver about the ingredients of the sectional champions.

One story of the 1983 baseball season was the diamond. Much time, money, and effort was put into it to make it one of the best in the area. New lights and scoreboards plus constant care of the field itself provided the Pioneers with a good home field and made night games possible.

In the first night game on the diamond, senior Dale Copeland pitched a "perfect" game, allowing no hits, walks, runs, or batters on base and no errors from the rest of the defense to chalk up another season highlight. The result was a 10-0 victory over Cathedral.

"Their character and discipline made the difference between a great season and a so-so one."

Other highlights of the season, according to Silver, included several winning streaks, the longest at ten games, winning the fifth consecutive sectional, and beating state ranked Lawrence North.

"But more importantly," said Silver, "I got to see certain individuals come on strong and finally maturing this year."

At sectionals, the Pioneers achieved their fifth straight title by outscoring Monrovia, 15-0, Plainfield, 4-0, and Martinsville, 6-1.

In regional action, the Pioneers held out to win a 2-1 contest over Greenwood to advance to the final game and easily defeat Bloomington North and advance to the Semi-State for the third straight year.

The Pioneers lost to Madison 3-2 in semi-state play after leading the majority of the game.

Small numbers make competition difficult

Boys track has disappointing season

"The track team maintained an excellent attitude during the course of the season," said varsity track coach Mr. Bob Hamm.

The team finished with a 1-7 record for two-way meets. They placed seventh when

I believe this team showed a great deal of character.

they hosted the Blue and Gold

Relays.

David Grubbs was the only senior member on the team, but experience was contributed by junior lettermen Dave Blessing, Jon Comer, Rick Grubbs, Greg Redding, Danny Sanders, and Neal Yeager.

Rick Grubbs, Jon Comer, and Greg Redding qualified for sectional competition: Grubbs in the high jump, Comer in the 1600 meter run, and Redding in the 3200 meter run. Grubbs also tied the high school's high jump record.

The season was disappointing because goals were not reached for a variety of reasons.

This year everybody had to go for individual goals because there were not enough members to win as a team, but we have next year.

Problems increased when the team lost other members due to injuries and academic reasons. Coach Hamm said, "I believe the team showed a great deal of character. Even though we were not having a successful season, they continued to work hard and tried to prove themselves."

Hurdler Danny Sanders said, "This year everybody had to go for individual goals because there were not enough members to win as a team, but we have next year."

Girls 3rd in Mid-State

"I knew we had the talent to have a successful year."

"I knew we had the talent to have a successful year," said girls track coach Dale Graves. "I just wasn't sure if enough of the girls would do their best and accomplish our goals."

The 1983 girls track team did accomplish several of its goals during the season. It ran to a record eight dual meet wins and a third place finish at the Mid-State Conference meet.

The team defeated Greenwood in a dual meet for the first time ever, and the girls reached their conference goal by placing third.

Jenny Bauer became conference champion in the 100 meter dash and was runner-up in the 400. The 1600 meter relay team of Jenny and Mary Bauer, Fonda Kizzee, and Amy Ginder was also conference champion.

Jenny Bauer also became a "first" in Mooresville track history when she advanced to the state finals after placing well in both sectional and regional competition.

"It was hard," said Jenny. "The track was just fantastic, and they (the other runners) were tough."

"She (Jenny) was just super," said Coach Graves. "She's one of those talented, dedicated athletes a coach always hopes for. She's looking forward to next year."

A few more records also broken during the season. Teresa Fairhurst set the put record at 32'3", and Jenny Bauer set the 800 meter record at 2:31.2.

Jenny Bauer was named most valuable runner, and Amy Ginder was most improved.

"I was pleased with our results," concluded Coach Graves. "I hope next year will be as good."

Close friends make a good team

Tennis chalks up winning season

"They're a good group of girls; fine outstanding women!" said Coach Maureen Nichols commenting on the 1983 girls tennis team.

The season was a building season for the team. The team consisted of twenty girls, the largest team ever.

"The girls were always in good moods," said Coach Nichols. "They were a close group of good friends."

Although the season was a little "disappointing" for

Coach Nichols, she thought "the girls represented Mooresville very well."

The season concluded with a record of eleven wins and five losses.

During the sectional team tournament, the girls, as a team, were defeated by Southport! Sharon France moved on to the girls singles tournament. She was defeated by a score of 6-2 6-0 by Julie Banks, who was ranked fourth in the state from Ritter

High School.

"She (Banks) was good! She hit everything back!" said Sharon. "I was playing real well, but I still got beat. I double faulted more times than I should have."

The singles players were Sharon France, number one,

Reserve teams seek competition, experience Coaches praise freshmen, reserves

Freshman Baseball

Speaking of freshman baseball team highlights, Coach Will Shepherd said the thing that was particularly pleasing was the team's strong showing against conference teams as the boys won every conference contest.

Greg Meador was the most consistent freshman pitcher with a 6-4 record, and Kenny Stout and Steve Bowman were the leading hitters.

Reserve Baseball

"It was another good year for us," said reserve baseball coach Steve Hilligoss. "The team blended well, was a good hitting team, and played the kind of defense the last two weeks of the season that we strive to play. Learning the fundamentals and improving is what reserve baseball is all about, and I'm proud to say we did just that."

One of the highlights of the 10-6 season was a six-game winning streak.

Reserve players Tim Cochennour, Mike Crockett, Charlie Baker, and Troy Ryan led the team with .300+ batting averages, while Jack Finklea led in sacrifice bunts, Kevin Bradshaw with runs batted in, Scott McDaniel with stolen bases, and Steve Jones in on-base average.

Reserve Girls Tennis

The girls reserve tennis team was a team which was formed to provide experience for the girls. Although surrounding schools also had reserve teams, the sizes of the teams varied from school to school. Due to this situation, the girls did not always get to play, or they had to play twice. However, the reserve girls had to practice just as much as the varsity girls did. Practicing with the varsity team provided the training they needed to become varsity material.

Despite the problems with the varied sizes of the teams, the girls' season was ended with a record of four wins and seven losses.

Reserve Golf

Mooreville was a true leader of schools in reserve golf since few reserve teams even existed. Many schools just didn't hassle with the logistics of transporting a team of underclassmen who couldn't share the driving responsibilities.

Despite the fact that the reserve team was only able to compete with five schools of the varsity's 14-team schedule, Coach John Riley believed the effort of having a reserve team was worthwhile.

He said the experience the young players gained should pay off in 1984 after four members of the 1983 team graduated.

From the beginning of the season, the goal of the reserve team was to play and not worry about a win-loss record.

Reserve Track

Much like reserve golf, one of the main problems with reserve track was finding competition. So few competing schools had enough boys for both varsity and reserve teams that the younger players were only able to compete at their level in one triple dual and three dual meets.

Also like golf, the most valuable experience of such a situation was the opportunity to practice with varsity players.

Faculty: keepers of the "class"

Action verbs have objects linking verbs don't! This jingle was heard quite often by Mrs. Betty Roberts' junior English classes when they studied verbs. Those having Mr. Hubert Alexander for class were often reminded to "never trouble trouble 'till trouble troubles you."

Each faculty member had his own personality and style of teaching. Some had well-known sayings; while some had distinctive gestures that set them apart from others.

Whatever the style, each teacher seemed to get his point across fairly well.

The faculty of Mooresville High School represented much more than a teaching staff to many students. Teachers offered advice when asked and sometimes even when they were not! Teachers were friends to many MHS students.

Some of the most important individuals of MHS, the faculty, displayed "real class" in a way unlike anyone else.

Providing a break from the seriousness of awards day is chemistry teacher Mr. Hubert Alexander.

Teachers can be human?

Faculty members let hair down

Skits at MHS played an important part in promoting school spirit. Among some of the best were skits performed by faculty members. Many teachers turned in their "straight-as-a-board" image in exchange for a little craziness.

"Being in the skits shows the students that teachers can make fools out of themselves just as well as the students can," said Mr. Greg Silver.

Skits were often done to get students fired up for a sectional or regional week. They also helped the athletes lose their pregame "jitters" for a while.

Mrs. Betty Roberts found that having a drama major and always having professional acting in the back of her mind prompted her into participating in the skits.

First year teacher Mrs. Cathy Wolfe found that "being a ham" qualified her to be in the skits.

Kids rap with revs

New to MHS was the "Rap with the Rev" program. Ministers from community churches donated their time to this program once a week. Students were able to discuss problems, accomplishments, or just "rap with the revs."

Ministers participating in the program were: Terry Crist, Church of Mt. Gilead; Glen Flowers, First Baptist; Allen Kirk, Church of God; Bob Kolentus, St. Thomas Moore; David Layson, Free Methodist; Bill McVay, Grace Missionary; Ron Prilliman, Heritage Christian; Ken Taylor, Five Points Baptist; Harold Walker, First United Methodist; and Danny Yeager, Friendswood Baptist. Alternates were: Perry Anderson, Monrovia Christian; Jack Elliott, Gasburg Baptist; Rex Miller, Mooresville Friends Church; and Richard Puryear, First Baptist.

Rev. Walker felt that for the first year the program was good, but the location of the room hindered the students' participation. Walker also thought that many students did not participate because of peer pressure.

It helps when students need to talk to someone about their problems because the ministers give unbiased opinions," said junior Susannah Brewer.

"We anticipated a slow start thinking the students would be hesitant, but it wasn't the case overall. Students were really positive," said Rev. Crist.

Fireball retires

Mrs. Betty Roberts, better known as "Fireball" (after the race car driver Fireball Roberts), retired at the end of the 1982-83 school year after twenty years of teaching at MHS. After graduating from Purdue University with a Bachelor of Science degree, majoring in both Speech-Drama and English, she taught at Marion High School and English High School. She also taught one year at Plainfield.

Throughout the course of her career at MHS, she directed plays, sponsored the cheerleaders, the cheerblock, National Honor Society, and, at one time or another, all the classes. She was sometimes seen dressed as a cheerleader, band member, or Fruit-of-the-Loom's Emma for skits or yearbook commercials.

Students and faculty members said they would miss Mrs. Roberts' enthusiasm and sense of humor

"It won't be the same around here without her," said chemistry teacher Hubert Alexander

Upon retiring, she plans to spend more time with her husband and enjoy her three grandchildren

"I've really enjoyed these years. Young people can be trying at times; but for the most part, I find that they're fun and present a challenge that keeps one young," she said. "I'll never forget the good times and good people at Mooresville High School."

School board plans for 1985

One of the biggest jobs in the school corporation is that of school board member. The responsibility is high; pay is low; often criticism is great, and the hours are numerous.

So why do people want the job?

Vice-President Tom Lloyd said, "My main reason for running for school board was my concern for the education of my children and also the education of others."

President Dr. David Pearson stated that his parents' involvement in school administration and teaching stirred his interest in education. When the opportunity to run for the school board came to him, he decided it was a good time to run.

One of the big decisions of the 1983 school board was to make definite plans for an addition to the high school that would include an auditorium, library, and spectator gymnasium in addition to renovating science and home economic departments and extending the music department and agriculture facilities.

1983 School Board: Mr. Jimmie Neitzel, Mr. Charles Swisher (secretary), Mr. Earl Black, Mr. Tom Lloyd (vice-president), Dr. David Pearson (president).

Mrs. Mary Lee Bowman leads discussion in second year German class

Many teachers work after hours

For many teachers, work was much more than a 7:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. job. It wasn't unusual to see teacher cars parked at the school late at night or even on weekends.

Teachers who worked the extra hours listed meetings, grading papers, extracurricular activities, and special projects in the category of things that took time after school.

Mrs. Mary Lee Bowman said she found it personally rewarding to spend the extra time to be organized and felt it was too easy to be complacent, especially when the students are deprived. Bowman emphasized that teaching is "a profession, not a job." She added, "In my interpretation a professional is one who seeks to improve without promise of more money or added benefits."

One of the most frequently seen people after school hours was athletic director Don Pope, who said he felt the extra time he put in was rewarding because he enjoyed working with athletes and coaches.

"What I am doing now is a big part of my life," Pope said. "I have always been in athletics and I enjoy the contact with people."

Staffs serve behind the scenes

Behind the scenes at MHS the custodial and cooking staffs kept things running smoothly. Although the remodeling of the school's exterior made cleaning trying at times, the custodial staff came through with flying colors. Head custodian Marge Brown said that the mild winter was a blessing to her staff as far as making cleaning easier.

New to the cooks was the addition of "cooks choice" to the school menu. Head cook Edna Bush felt that the addition was a good one in that she was able to prepare what the students liked instead of preparing a standard menu.

Even though the custodial and cooking staffs were not always in the "limelight" their work was greatly appreciated by the faculty and students.

Album: "Class" Pictures

The year, 1983, was filled with moments of happiness and sadness, fear and apprehension, as Mooresville High School said "hello" to 295 Freshmen and "goodbye" to 224 Seniors.

Each class possessed distinctive characteristics that separated it from others. Some showed talent in athletics, some in academics, and others in spirit. During class competition, each class attempted to outdo the others, whether it be a vocal competition or a relay race. However, in the end, all united as one to achieve a common goal — to create "Real Class" throughout the student body.

Grosskreutz, Henley lead Senior Class of 1983

The "Class of 1983" was sponsored by Mr. Robert Grosskreutz, head of the math department, and Mr. Jeff Henley, English teacher

Mr. Henley guided the seniors through building a second place homecoming float, "Haunt'em To Their Grave." Henley also helped organize the wills and testaments for the senior paper

Mr. Grosskreutz organized ordering and passing out senior paddles. The biggest task for him though was organizing the graduation ceremony. He helped with caps and gowns, announcements, and presenting a slide show at Commencement

The slide show was a memorable view of the seniors' lives. It showed pictures of when they were babies, in grade school, through junior high and high school, and finally the seniors' last year in high school

Class shares "Senioritis" symptoms 99th MHS class graduates

The class of 1983 became a formal group as Paul Hadley seventh graders in 1977. They were scared stiff; but, as most teens, they were eager to meet new friends. As most classes, they had their little groups, but as the years passed, they reached out to achieve new friends.

Their freshman year was probably the most frightening and confusing one. This was the year they were exposed to a new school, upper-classmen, trash cans, the chance to be in a reserve and possible even a varsity sport, and the ultimate challenge — building a float! Although they spent time and hard work on the float, like many freshmen classes, they received fourth place.

Since the class received last place on its floats, both freshman and sophomore years, the group tried its hardest to make the best float possible the junior year. The class succeeded, winning first place!

As the senior year rolled around, class members noticed there was something unique about themselves. The little groups they had formed were becoming one big family.

The one thing they shared most was "senioritis"! Everyone had it in one way or another. They waved their paddles (not only in the air!), "canned" freshmen, and continued many other traditions.

The Pioneers of '83 would always remember and cherish the times at MHS. They had reached goals, gained and lost friends, and in "time," achieved "Real Class"!

Schwarz is class president

"Now that I'm president, I have gotten to know the class better," said senior class president, Erik Schwarz. "I feel a lot closer to the class, and I've made a lot more friends."

Being an officer of the senior class has many responsibilities. The officers must organize committees for the senior paper, paddles, float and graduation ceremonies. This takes hard work, but mostly, it takes time. The most important part of being an officer is representing the class.

As class sponsor, Robert Grosskreutz explained people, whether students, faculty or parents, look at the Class of '83 through the officers

The officers' actions and attitudes toward school activities symbolize what the rest of the class is like

MHS and the community of Mooresville were able to see the class of '83 through Spotlighters, flag and rifle corps, golf, OEA, the Pulse staff, basketball, and Honor Society.

The senior class of 1983 was represented by Erik Schwarz, president; Doug Hastings, vice-president; Jill Prescott, secretary; and Jayne Quillen, treasurer

Paddles remain tradition

For many years Mooresville High School seniors had looked forward to the tradition of owning a senior paddle. Although the class was threatened with the elimination of the paddle tradition of "seniority" due to paddle abusers — actually freshman abusers of past classes, one more year was allowed under good behavior saving the tradition for the Class of '83.

Once again seniors strutted down the halls and to the football field the day of Homecoming demonstrating to everyone how proud they were to be seniors.

Senior Melodie Cochran summed up the paddle feeling: "The senior paddle brings spirit, and it is something you will always have to bring back your high school memories."

Finland, Switzerland, Spain send teenagers to MHS

Exchange students share cultures

"In Switzerland, when we talk about America, we think of big houses, big cars, Coca-Cola, and hamburgers," said exchange student Eric Nagels. Indeed many foreigners have both good and bad misconceptions of the United States, but after experiencing American culture, they have changed their opinions. "The teenagers in Finland think that over here everything is great," said Krisi Vainikka. "I do like it here, but of course there is something wrong with every country."

Foreign exchange students Eric Nagels from Switzerland, Krisi Vainikka from Finland, and Rafael Ramiro from Spain, all agreed that although changes in culture are difficult to adjust to, the hardest problems was learning English. "People just don't talk like they do in the books. When I came here, I could understand only the books and not the people," said Rafael. But now I understand 'Americano' and speak it fast."

Exchange students arrive at the beginning of the school year and stay in the country until mid-summer. While they are here, they live with a sponsoring family in the community, and attend school daily even though they do not receive credit for their school year in the U.S.

Each of the exchange students has at least one year of high school left in their home countries; after which they must take a selectivity test, to determine what kind of post-high school education they are eligible for. After the student takes the test, the score is averaged with his high school grade average. This is what is considered when the student applies for a college. For example, an engineering school may require a 7.9 average (out of ten).

Soon after the school year started, Eric went out for the tennis team. Showing extraordinary talent, he became the number two singles player on the varsity team, even though the game is a little different than it is at his home. In Switzerland, tennis courts are not on sand, and we slide on the place," said Eric. In Switzerland, as in most of Europe, the schools don't sponsor athletic teams. However, there are still places to get involved in sports. "Many towns have clubs, and we go to the gym to play," said Eric.

In Spain, Switzerland, and Finland, the driving age is 16. "Here people drive around the time, but in Spain you can't get a car until you are of college," said Rafael. "If you want to go to some place with your girlfriend, you need a bike or you walk."

As interesting as the books they stand between are foreign exchange students Eric Nagels, Krisi Vainikka, and Rafael Ramiro.

Juniors sell magazines, concessions to finance prom

Crites, Justus, Bradshaw, Davee lead class of '84

Class officers Brian Crites, Kevin Bradshaw, Misty Davee, and Brad Justus get class sponsor Mr. Jim Bradshaw and his wife to drive them in the Homecoming parade

The successful year of 1982-83 helped give the juniors a big boost of self-confidence to look forward to their senior year. The class was led by Brian Crites, president; Kevin Bradshaw, vice-president; Brad Justice, treasurer; and Misty Davee, secretary. Class sponsors were Mr. Jim Bradshaw and Mr. Stan Hall.

The junior class was very busy with float construction, parades, magazine sales, concessions, and the prom. The prom, "Saturday in the Park," was the major project of the junior year.

Speaking about the junior concession stand workers, Mr. Hall said, "It is a breeze this year. I don't have to worry about a thing ... and the profits have been good."

Junior float wins three firsts

The night was cool and clear as the crowd awaited the results of the 1982 float competition. As they neared the announcement of first place the juniors were in ecstasy. The stands became alive with cheering juniors who had put forth time and effort hoping to produce a winning float. They had succeeded.

The theme, "Smurf 'em Pioneers," was based on the lovable blue cartoon characters, the Smurfs. The Smurfs tour had only begun with the winning of the MHS Homecoming.

They went on the road to Martinsville Fall Foliage, changing the theme to "Smurfin' in the Fall." The float placed first, and the class was awarded $500.00. The group went back on the road to travel to the Franklin Festival Parade where they received another first and won $400.00.

Class sponsor, Mr. Jim Bradshaw, said several factors were responsible for success — "great idea, good workers and long hours of work." Regarding the win at Franklin,

Bradshaw said, "I was really surprised that we won, but we did deserve it."

As the Smurfs journey came to an end the juniors' spirits were high knowing their job was well done.

Class of '84 creates "Saturday in the Park" prom Prom is major junior effort

Balloons, lights, music, and flowers. Does it remind you of a park? That was the mood the juniors achieved. "Saturday in the Park," the theme for the '83 Junior-Senior Prom was created May 14 at the Sheraton Midtown. Balloons made into bouquets in pots set in the middle of the table, flowers on the trees, and music to dance to created the festive effect. "I have talked to a lot of people and received positive comments on the prom," said class sponsor Mr. Stan Hall. "Everyone seemed to have a good time."

Juniors began raising money for the prom at the beginning of the year by selling magazines and working concessions at boys basketball games. The prom steering committee was selected by participation in magazine sales and involvement in school activities. The committee got together early in the year to decide on theme, decorations, music, and the selection of the royal court. The workers then got busy with the election of the court and distribution of prom and post prom tickets. They spent the afternoon of May 14 working on last minute details. The hard work paid off as the evening turned out as they had planned. "These juniors were easy to work with, and they made the prom a great success," concluded Hall

Sophs join in!

The class of '85 led by sponsors Mr. Jim Halstead and Mr. Max Gregory, although placing fourth with their float "Sail on to a Victory" in the Homecoming competition, still had highlights.

In sports, Kim Butrum and Carrie Henderson accented the girls' varsity basketball team, while Dan Thurston, Kevin Ramey, Terry Mork, and Marvin Jones helped out the boys' varsity basketball team.

Six sophomores; Michele McPhee, Shay Franklin, Lisa Whitted, Janice Spaulding, Tom Smitherman, and Marvin Jones found their way into Spotlighters. Mr. Raymond explained, "These sophomores are extremely talented and dedicated to the group. I not only have to consider the talent, but also the will."

One big step for many sophomores was getting their drivers' licenses and the responsibilities that go with them.

Class officers were Valerie Grubb, president; Rhonda Clair, vice president; Amanda Qualitza, secretary; and Jacquie Hall, treasurer.

The sophomore class officers and sponsors are: (clockwise) Rhonda Clair, Mr. Max Gregory, Mr. Jim Halstead, Amanda Qualitza, Jacquie Hall, and Valerie Grubb.

"Volunteer" Val leads class

"Everybody should be involved in at least one thing," says Valerie Grubb, sophomore

As a freshman, Valerie wanted to get involved, so she joined a few activities. By the end of her sophomore year, "Val," as most people call her, had accumulated 13 activities ranging from band to Mat Maids to being president of her class to announcing athletic contests and morning announcements. On top of all this, Val is a straight "A" student and claims that her grades come first. "If my grades drop, something has got to go!" she says.

Just how does she do it? "I just try to divide my time. It's hard because everybody expects 100% each activity and you end up trying to give 400%."

Valerie's major interest is announcing. She started by announcing boys basketball games for Mr. W. taker. She really enjoyed it and added a few events until she was announcing eight sports and the morning announcements.

Valerie hopes to major in broadcasting in college and become an "in field" sportscaster.

Sophomores, faces with braces!

"The food gets caught in them," said Fonda Kizzee.

Fonda isn't the only sophomore who gets food caught in "them". "Them" is referring to braces, and a lot of sophomores had to wear "them".

Food isn't the only problem with braces. Sometimes they come off, or as Steve Jones explained, "I was in basketball practice once, and I was nailed, and they (braces) embedded themselves in my lips." Eddy Parker said, "I was chewing on a guitar pick once, and the whole thing came out!"

A retainer usually follows braces. The process can take from one year to many years.

The first thoughts about getting braces are mixed. Debbie Sachs said, "First I thought it was neat, then I hated it! I didn't like what I had to do to make my teeth look better."

Finally getting them off was a big day for Kerin Chandler, "I felt relieved, and I thought my teeth looked smaller!"

"I knew I'd have a better smile," said Fonda.

Sophomore Debbie Sachs has made quite a few changes since her freshman year, and getting her braces taken off is one of them. Debbie still wears a retainer and will probably have to wear it at night until she graduates from high school. Debbie isn't fond of the retainer but said, "It's a whole lot better than braces. Anything is better than braces."

Sophs climb behind the wheel!

Taking driver's ed during the sophomore year of high school is almost as natural as finally turning 16 and not getting thrown into the trash can. Unlike turning 16 and learning to like trash cans again though, driver's ed takes a lot more responsibility and concentration. "Our kids are really conscientious about safety. We really push driving defensively," said driver's ed teacher, Mr. John Riley.

Most students said the course was worthwhile. "I understood a lot more of the things that I wouldn't have understood," said Rusty Baldea.

Summer's driver's ed is very different from winter, not so much in class, but in driving. Mr. Max Gregory, driver's ed teacher, talked about winter driver's ed. "We fill the requirements in 55 minutes you want to go where different driving situations happen. I try to put my students into all types of driving situations."

Mooresville has obviously had a good driving record. Neither teacher could think of any accidents caused by the student driver

"I try to prepare my students to react to possible emergency situations before the emergency becomes a reality," said Gregory.

Freshman Class officers Scott McDaniel, Diana Perkins, Robin Manley, and Dena Davis take on a position commonly known to a great deal of freshmen.

Many freshmen get "canned"

The class of '80 led by class officers, president Scott McDaniel, vice-president, Robin Manley; secretary Dena Davis, treasurer Diana Perkins; and sponsors, Mr. Dan Thurston and Mrs. Peggy Saylor, quickly adjusted to the challenge that MHS provided starting off the year on the right foot. The class float, "Raid the Hive" placed an impressive third in Homecoming competition.

With the help of upperclassmen, many freshmen became acquainted with the bottoms of hallway trash cans.

My pride was damaged since all of the people in first lunch saw it happen, said freshman Tom Poynter

When upperclassmen are relatives . . .

"Last year I was just an eighth grader who didn't know anything, but now that I'm in high school, I'm more on his level," said freshman Shelby Schwarz. "His level refers to her brother, senior Erik Schwarz."

Many seniors at MHS were "stuck" with brothers or sisters who were freshmen. Most of the seniors took advantage of the situation, finding that their younger brother or sister usually had spare lunch money.

Senior Sonya Bishop made the best of the situation by making her sister, Sheila, put the gas in the car.

"If she tries to hit me . . . I can always say, 'Remember the time I washed the dishes?'" said Georgette Nichols.

Although, at times, many of the seniors disliked having their brother or sister in high school with them, most agreed that the experience brought them closer together.

Senior drum major Carol Nichols leads her younger sister Georgette through band warm-up.

After school, Sonya Bishop patiently waits for her freshman sister Sheila.

Chris performs

Most freshmen spend their Christmas vacation recovering from their first semester of high school life. But for Chris Long, Christmas vacation meant performing in "Music Man" at the Indianapolis Civic Theatre.

"I was really surprised when they called me because it was around a week after I had auditioned, and since I hadn't heard anything I thought I hadn't got a part," said Chris.

She played a River City townsperson and although it was not a main part, she enjoyed it because she could develop her own character.

For her audition, Chris had to sing, dance, and read a few scenes from the play.

Chris felt that the experience she gained in the play will help her to get bigger and better parts.

The "Music Man" experience should be helpful to Chris since future plans include a career in theater and voice. She even hopes to travel to New York for other auditions.

Final events: a "class" ending

A memorable year came to an end with the celebration of the final events. The Choir Department's Spring Spectacular Jamboree, the prom, and post prom were all attended by many.

The prom and post prom, organized by the Junior Class and the class members' parents, presented occasions to the themes "Saturday in the Park" and "Roaring Twenties."

Final events were especially special to the seniors who saw their high school careers end at a dignified, sentimental commencement ceremony.

These final events reflected the "real class" that the students of Mooresville High School expected.

Spectacular makes second run

"Jamboree" was the theme as the Music Department presented its second annual Spring Spectacular. The event, which replaced the traditional spring musical in 1982, was a two-and-one-half hour music-filled extravaganza.

Once again the main attraction was the swing choir, the Spotlighters, the group that had collected many awards including a 95.3 rating at the World of Music Festival in Nashville, Tennessee. The group used up-beat songs like "Step Up To The Mike" to charge the audience.

The freshman choir, renamed Genesis, discarded frosh inhibitions and donned

50's garb to sing "My Music."

Both Sugar-n-Spice, an all-female group, and Varsity Singers added more choreography to their programs, with members of the groups creating some of the choreography themselves.

Also featured were the jazz bands playing swing music with an impressive jazz orchestra sound.

Some of the Spotlighters ventured out on their own as Brian Carpenter performed John Cougar's "Jack and Diane," Kathy Hicks and Debbie Caine sang a duet, and Brian Crites did a humorous western style folk song.

Tradition was also broken in the placement of the stage. "Former productions, because of lighting hassles, had always used only one side of the gymnasium bleachers, consequently wasting much side space. In "Jamboree," the stage was built at the north end of the gym. Both sides of the bleachers and extra floor space for chairs left enough room for the audience to feel more than comfortable. The set was also unique due to the use of a large raised stage and a glittering backdrop made from a huge scrim and several flats giving the Spectacular an even more professional look than it had in its previous production."

The posture has to be just right for Susan Kellum to hit a high note

Park benches, parasols, and purple trees were all a part of Mooresville High School's 1983 prom, "Saturday in the Park," held at the Sheraton Midtown.

Prom sponsor Stan Hall said, "I've done about six proms, and I really thought this was the best one; and I didn't do anything! The kids did it all!"

The prom steering committee, led by chairperson Natalie Matt, was responsible for everything from deciding what the theme was to blowing up 1,003 balloons that were used for the decorations. Natalie said, "I thought the class worked well together. We got a lot of work done, but we had a good time; and we received a lot of compliments on it."

Chris Gray and Jeff Berg were honored with the coveted titles of prom queen and king, while Teresa Flowers and Gary Sarver reigned as princess and prince.

"bucks" which could be redeemed for several of over 600 prizes

The parents were responsible for decorations, a prize booth, concession stand games, keeping the peace, and performing visual and musical entertainment. The effort was directed by Vice-Principal Norb Johnson and co-

Organizations: the unique "class"

Some sang and danced, some played instruments, some spoke foreign languages, some helped with community activities, and still others just had fun sharing common interests. Whatever their purpose or goal, the organizations at Mooresville High School were as unique as the members involved.

To provide students with a break from the everyday, hum-drum routine, MHS offered numerous organizations and an activity period nearly every Wednesday. Organizations such as Student Council required an election for membership. Honor Society required the writing of an essay and teacher recommendations for admittance, but for many, the only requirement for membership was interest in the particular group and its activities.

Whatever a person's interests, there seemed to be plenty of organizations to accommodate him. Each organization had a unique style that showed a special type of "Real Class."

Spotlighter members Donny Coffey, Dave Durochik, and Marvin Jones dress-up for a toga party at Nashville.

Illustrating the lyrics, "It's a reminder, a memory finder," are Spotlighters Tom Smitherman and Lori Hampton.

Changing the activities board keeps junior Sun-hine Society members Julie Gajderowicz, Ginger Hart, and Savannah Brewer extremely busy.

Some students decided to continue their study of foreign languages and joined foreign language clubs

International Club promoted understanding among cultures and people. The club was sponsored by Mrs. Carolyn Blickenstaff and Mrs. Michele Rector. The club did various cultural activities involving the foreign exchange students and hosted an exchange student weekend. The officers of the club included co-presidents, Tonya Mork and Kirsi Vainikka; vice-president, Utahna Jessup; secretary, Tami Adams

Spanish Club was sponsored by Mrs. Carolyn Blickenstaff. The president was Troy Messer, and the secretary was Sally Colbert. The club participated in the Homecoming carnival, Foreign Language Week, and a Christmas party

The French Club was involved in many activities including, a French dinner at La Tour Restaurant and a Christmas party at Noble Romans. The club sold candy to raise money. Officers were co-presidents, Deanna Hicks and Alison Moss; vice-president Eric Nagels; treasurer Rhonda Worland; secretary Anastasia Cerreto; sponsor

The German Club was managed by the students. The members had the opportunity to learn leadership skills and to organize activities for the benefit of all. Various activities included Little Luvlies, German Honor Society Dinner, and Miss Oktoberfest (State German Student Contest)

Mooreville was the base institution for the state association of Students of German. The president of Mooreville's German Club was automatically the treasurer of the Indiana Association of Students of German. Officers were president, Geoff Wright; vice-president, Greg Even; treasurer, Missy Stonebraker; secretary, Valerie Grubb; Sergeant-At-Arms, Brian Walls; and sponsor, Mrs. Mary Lee Bowman

All the foreign language clubs took a trip to King's Island toward the end of the year. French teacher Michele Rector summed up the importance of the clubs. "I feel that the clubs are very important because they enhance the learning and cultural experiences of the foreign language classes

Some lead; some join; some follow

ICE (Interdisciplinary Cooperative Education) was a class offered at Mooresville High School that gave students a chance to earn while they learned. The class was divided into two sections. One section was the related or classroom phase. In this phase the students met for one hour each day and learned about different areas related to getting and keeping a job and succeeding at it. Some areas discussed included: interviewing, writing resumes, safety, insurance, managing money, banking, and attitude. The second phase was the cooperative or on-the-job phase. This phase required that a student be employed at an approved training station, work a minimum of fifteen hours per week, and be paid. The student usually was employed with job entry level kinds of skills relating to his or her job. Employers evaluated the ICE students on certain criteria each six weeks which was the basis for the cooperative grade. The related or classroom grade was derived from tests, quizzes, and other assignments. Students received a total of six credits for successfully completing the ICE class.

The Student Council was a group of students elected by their classmates to "relate opinions of the school to the administration and to find new ways to improve the student/school interests," said sophomore Student Council member Steve Jones.

Homecoming was the Council's major event with the group sponsoring a dance, parade, and halftime activities. The group also sponsored a special day — "Student Teacher Day."

The group also sponsored a school blood draw which generated 77 pints of blood, and members represented the student body when the school board discussed the value of open lunch.

Other activities included a trip to King's Island, weekly announcements over the intercom, and the election of class officers and representatives.

Said president Susan Kelum, "Much effort is put in by each Council member in special activities (Homecoming, etc) that's never recognized. This is to be expected because we, as members, are here to serve, not to receive praise."

Susan's vice-president was Deanna Head, and the sponsor was librarian John Robertson.

Campus Life member Tim Hundertmark described the organization as "a group of people who get together to discuss problems that we are faced with and how to handle them."

Among the many Campus Life activities were trips to Florida, Chicago, and New York. The group went skiing, canoeing, and met once each month with other Indiana Campus Life clubs for a Super Club.

For fund-raisers, the club sold pizzas, worked at Scream-in-the-Dark (a haunted house sponsored by Campus Life clubs), and skated at a Roller-a-thon.

School sponsors were Mr. Joel Beebe and Mrs. Aloha Landwerlen. The club did not have officers, but meetings were planned by Rick Doyle, an associate staff member who worked for Youth For Christ.

Cadet Teachers from MHS spent an hour of each school day assisting the elementary teachers in the Mooresville area. The group was sponsored by Mr. Richard Franklin as an organization of the Future Teachers of America. The students received an evaluation in the form of a grade and were given credit.

Office Education Association represented Mooresville High School through various activities in the 1983-1984 year. The club was sponsored by Mr. Stan Hall, and the officers were Jeff Berg, president, Randy Sokol, vice president, Tracey Spoon, secretary, and Kevin Moore, treasurer.

Members were mostly business students looking to further their business education. They were involved in parties, sales kits, and district and state conferences. The object of the sales kits was to send as many delegates to the OEA State Conference as possible. The Mooresville OEA Chapter sponsored a candidate for the OEA State Leadership Board; junior Natalie Matt was elected to the board. The Members of OEA ended the year with a banquet honoring the best lab student and OEA member.

Science Club returns; Honor Society revamps Clubs encourage academics

The activities list for the year saw the reappearance of an old group: Science Club. The club was discontinued a few years ago, but Mr. Hubert Alexander, the instructor of the group, felt the interest was still there. "The size of the club impresses me," he commented on the more than 60 students who were involved in Science Club.

The organization studied many areas of science. "It (Science Club) is here to give the students added experience in various fields of science, to enhance appreciation of science, and to have an enjoyable time learning it," said Alexander. His want of exposure to the different fields of physical science showed in the variety of activities performed. In the area of chemistry, experiments in combustion and oxidation were conducted, and in physics, heat, light and electricity, and radiation were investigated and discussed.

Much to the dismay of a few weak-stomached members, dissection was also included in the "curriculum" representing the field of biology. Frogs fell victim to the advancement of the sciences and the scalpel as they were explored and compared to human anatomy.

In the past, Science Club often took exciting trips to museums and labs as far away as Michigan, but the cost to again take such a journey would be "astronomical," so the group took no trips.

Attendance from week to week was also a small problem. Sometimes only five to ten students would show up, then the next week 25 to 30 would appear, which caused problems in providing enough equipment for the experiments. "Back when we took trips, attendance was compulsory to qualify for the trip," said Alexander, "but now I have to count on the interest of the students for attendance." Even so, the club got off to a good "beginning."

Honor Society was also busy during the year. Considered the elite organization, one had to have a 3.5 or better grade point average to be eligible to be inducted. Even then, one was considered on the aspects of character, involvement, and leadership. The group visited and ate at the Spagetti Factory. They also delivered "Goblin Grams." These were little messages, sweet or evil, given in the shape of a pumpkin to an unsuspecting person. The tapping ceremony, held in the spring, honored the individual accomplishments of the eligible students.

Spotlighters place first at National Music Festival

Choirs work with intensity

"I think the idea of dancing to their music and working towards excellence gives everyone the incentive to work hard," said Mr. Gene Raymond, director of Spotlighters. The Spotlighters, a swing choir made up of 36 MHS students, became well-known through their ability to perform. They practiced two nights a week for two hours in addition to daily class time.

The '83 group performed at numerous places including the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Indianapolis, Mooresville Alumni Banquet and Plainfield Elks. They also participated in showcases at Zionsville and Beech Grove high schools

Most "Spots" said that being a part of the group was fun and rewarding. Junior

Brian Crites said, "It (being a Spotlighter) helps to communicate and gives me the self-confidence that is good for a performance."

Going to Nashville was the highlight of the year. The 36 member group spent two days in Nashville for performances and sightseeing. The group rehearsed at the famous Nashville Palace but performed in a local high school Spotlighters won the swing-choir category with an average of 95.3. This score was the second highest of all participating groups, including bands and orchestras. Sunday was spent sightseeing in Opryland.

"We all had a great time and Spotlighters performed with the intensity and dedication that has become synonymous with their name." said

Raymond

The 1983 Varsity Singers was a mixed group of 65 members who enjoyed singing different styles of music.

The goals of the group were to perform to the best of their ability, to work on vocal development, and to increase an appreciation for music as an art form

Although Varsity Singers were not "on-the-road" performers like some of the other choral groups, the group did have the opportunity to perform for several school events including WAGON TRAILS Revue, a Christmas concert, the choir department's 'Spring Spectacular," and the Class of '83's baccalaureate

Genesis, Sugar-n-Spice, Spot Removers add to choir program

Choirs outgrow facilities

What had formerly been known as the Cadet Choir became Genesis in 1983.

Despite the new name, the group was basically the same — all freshmen but bigger. The 77 members composed the largest frosh vocal group Raymond had directed.

Many of the members had also had junior high choral training, so they weren't necessarily new at the task even though they were freshmen. Still, the group was considered a kind of training ground for Varsity Singers, Sugar-n-Spice, and Spot-lighters.

The 1983 edition of Genesis performed at WAGON

TRAILS Revue, the Christmas concert, and Spring Spectacular.

Director Gene Raymond explained, "The best singers don't necessarily go into Spots. It all depends on their vocal quality. For Spotlighters, I look for a heavy sound; for Sugar-n-Spice I look for a poppy, modern sound."

Most of the songs for the 1983 Sugar-n-Spice group were from the 50's and 60's, a style that complimented the 13 girls' voices.

Sugar-n-Spice performed for women's groups, church organizations, mother and daughter banquets, and school concerts.

Most of the choreography for the group was done by Mrs. Sharon Raymond and partly by some students, while Mr. Raymond chose the songs. The girls performed with only piano accompaniment.

"I wanted to get involved," said Eddie Parker, "and it was something to do."

Behind or beside the Mooresville Spotlighters at every performance, stood the Spot Removers.

The stage crew was formed in 1982 when the Spotlighters first performed at national competition.

"You need to get as much singing in those fifteen minutes as you can," explained director Gene Raymond. "For the choir to set up the stage would waste time."

The Spot Removers' duties included setting up the stage, organizing the equipment, and rearranging the triangular risers between numbers. At Nashville, the Spot Removers were complimented by three judges on their work.

"They've done a good job this year," Raymond added. "They're really unsung heroes."

"I'll never forget the feeling of excitement, jubilation, and pride I felt as Carol and I held up the trophy and the whole band screamed and shouted," said co-drum major Linda Griffith after she and Carol Nichols earned the best drum major award at Bush Stadium. The Mooresville Pioneer Marching Band also won the Sweepstakes Award for best overall band. In addition to that contest, the band also competed at the Plainfield Invitational, the ISSMA district competition at Columbus, and at the state prelims in

Terre Haute

During the concert season, the band received a first division rating at the area concert band contest at Martinsville. The stage band participated in the Perry Meridian Jazz Festival and also performed at several other functions throughout the year.

A record 103 individuals competed in the district solo and ensemble contest. Seventy first division ratings were earned at district and seven members went on to win first division ratings at the state contest.

The flag and rifle corps again performed at the Indiana-Kentucky All-Star game at Market Square Arena and also performed at the International Secretaries Convention. It competed along with the band during marching season and four girls won a first in a district ensemble contest. Said choreographer Peggy Weber of the seniors, "The seniors this year were a very dependable group. They really worked hard and made it a good year."

Near the end of the year the band and the corps traveled to Washington D.C. for a tour of the nation's capitol and to compete. They marched in the Firefighter's Parade, which is a function of the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester, Virginia. The corps placed second overall in that parade, and the band was tenth in the Grand Feature Parade. The band also competed in a concert contest. Concluded director Jerry Weber, "Overall the trip was a very successful, educational experience and opportunity."

FHA emphasizes family; Sunshine serves many

Sunshine, FHA have busy year

Mooreville High School's Sunshine Society based its year on the theme "Color the World with Love." The 60 members attended conventions and performed service projects. As a tradition, each girl chose one woman as her "Ideal Lady" and gave her gifts on various special occasions. At the end of the year, the members revealed themselves to their "Ideal Ladies" at a banquet in their honor.

Sunshine gave $400 to the Riley Children's Foundation and jumped rope to raise $750 for the Heart Foundation. Other service projects were caroling at the nursing home, and a Halloween party for children. Some school projects included: delivering cookies and apples to teachers, giving the bus drivers hot chocolate and doughnuts, and posting announcements on the sign in front of the school.

Sponsored by Mrs. Karen Yeager and Mrs. Darlene Lewis, the officers were Rebecca Brinkmann, president; Kathie Chandler, vice president; Susannah Brewer, treasurer; Debbie Winely, recording secretary; Shannon Flaskamp, corresponding secretary; and Natalie Matt and Diana Cole, scrapbook keepers.

Future Homemakers of America spent the year "concentrating on promoting the family and other home economic-related subjects," said sponsor Mrs. Joan Jarvis.

The FHA officers were Susan Smalling, president; Mary Derbyshire, vice president; Holly Barnett, secretary, and Kim Hornaday, treasurer.

The club activities for the year included selling keychains and chocolate bunnies attending state conference at the Hyatt-Regency, going on a spring trip, and having a February lock-in. The year concluded with a dinner to install the officers for the 1984 school year.

Activities meet interests

Major activities and fund-raisers for Lettermen's Club included the powderpuff football game and a hamburger eating contest at the Homecoming carnival. The club also sponsored a class basketball tourney and a fan bus for the girls sectional basketball game. The club was sponsored by Mr. Denny Pelley.

The Bowling Club had one major activity, bowling. The club bowled at Pioneer Lanes during activity period. The group's sponsor was Mr. Jim Whitaker.

Members of Future Farmers of America attended the Farm Progress and the Natural Farm March shows, as well as the FFA State Convention. They also took part in district contests, and the Indiana State Fair, and went to training camps.

The group also went fishing in Canada, had campouts, softball and basketball games, a Christmas party, and a pancake breakfast.

To raise funds, the group sold fruit, vegetable plants, and planted their chapter's plots.

The officers were president, Diana Cole; vice-president, Donnie Dyer; secretary, Mandy Neitzel; treasurer, Brian Davee; representative, Luke Pauley; and sentinel, Randy Keown.

Other activities included a trip to Rockville to visit the Sugar Maple Festival. The club raised funds by selling Pioneer stew before the homecoming football game. Officers were Tom Warthan, president; Rick Jackson, vice-president; Neal Allman, treasurer; and James Hoffman, secretary. The club's sponsor was Mr. Don Adams.

Mat Maids, Bat Girls assist teams

Call it slavery

"Spirit was good with our group which made the meets fun and exciting," said sponsor Mr. William Shepherd. The Mat Maids did much to promote spirit throughout the 1982-83 wrestling season. They offered their support by making spirit signs, decorating lockers, buying them goodies, and cheering at the meets. The girls took on the responsibility of organizing and helping run the Holiday Classic Tournament which was a great success. Fund raisers were important to the group to buy the wrestling sweatshirts and flowers for senior parents. All these activities were led by officers — president, Debbie Winely, captain, Jennifer Murat; co-captain, Lori Gwynn; and freshman captain, Honie Estell.

"A good group of Bat Girls is worth its weight in gold," said Bat Girl sponsor Steve Hilligoss. "They take care of a lot of the little things that the coach doesn't have time to do."

Some of the "little things" that were included as 1983 Bat

Girl responsibilities were: keeping statistics of the games, taking admission, announcing, and working in the concession stand. The girls also offered support to the baseball teams and tried to spread their enthusiasm to the fans.

Freshman Bat Girl Georgette Nichols said, "Bat Girls learn a lot about baseball along with good sportsmanship." She added, "And the boys treat us with the respect we like, especially the cute ones."

Officers for the varsity Bat Girls were Nora Franko, president, and Tracey Spoon, vice-president. Reserve Bat Girl officers were Amanda Qualitza, president, and Deanna Hicks, vice-president. Georgette Nichols was president, and Mari Wright was vice-president of the freshman group.

Vice President Tracey Spoon, senior Robin Riddle, and junior Julie Garderowicz keep the score at a Varsity baseball game while closely watching the umpire's calls. Keeping busy is never a problem with girls in charge of admissions, announcing and statistics.

Retreats, national conferences highlight FCA activities

Kellum is area's top athlete

Sponsor Steve Hilligoss said, "I see FCA as an important aspect of high school for a person who is interested in both athletics and Christ."

The 1983 FCA huddles did make the group an important aspect of their lives as they became one of the largest and most active extracurricular activities in the school.

Activities for the groups included night meetings, a Butler mini-conference, church visitations, and fall and spring retreats at the FCA National Conference Center.

In addition, Cornerstone, a quartet of FCA boys (Don Coffey, Kevin Bradshaw, Brian Crites, and Marvin Jones), sang at many events throughout the year including the spring boys retreat and the greater Indianapolis area "Athlete of the Year Banquet."

The boys huddle also ushered community Thanksgiving and Good Friday services. The girls huddle ushered the community Easter sunrise service and participated in the girls huddle's first "lock-in."

Members from both huddles attended the greater Indianapolis "Athlete of the Year Banquet" at which girls huddle member Susan Kellum was honored as the area's "female athlete of the year."

Money-making projects were sponsored by the group to help finance some of the members' trips to summer national conferences. The fund-raisers included the operation of a coat check at home boys basketball games and a candy sale.

Hilligoss described the na-

Kristin Smitherman, Susan Baughman, Kim Hubbard, and Libby Holmes relax before a huddle meeting at the girls lock-in tional conference as "a week of inspiration and perspiration when athletes come together to compete and study the Bible and Christianity."

While MHS huddles were led by many, the officers were especially important to the groups. Boys huddle officers were Jeff Sims, Kevin Bradshaw, Brian Crites, and Chris Lemon. Girls huddle officers were Melodie Cochran, Carol Nichols, Jenny Bauer, and Sharon France. Huddle sponsors were Steve Hilligoss and Jim Halstead.

"Real Class" staff

The 1982-83 edition of WAGON TRAILS was the result of much hard work on the part of the entire staff.

Long hours were put in by the staff after school writing copy, drawing layouts, taking and cropping pictures and making sure everything fit just perfectly and looked just right.

We, the editors, would like to take this opportunity to thank each member of the staff for their help, understanding, and cooperation, especially during hectic times. We would also like to say a big "thank-you" to our adviser, Mrs. Diana Hadley, for putting up with us at all hours and for her superb help and to her husband, Clark "Superman" Hadley, for taking pictures when everyone else was "too busy" to do it. Without these individuals this book would not have been possible.

We hope you enjoy this book as much as we enjoyed putting it together.

Class of 1983 is ninety-ninth class to graduate 224 become Mooresville alumni

224 graduates were added to the Mooresville alumni on May 22, 1983. The class of '83 had finally reached its ultimate goal in high school.

The two academic leaders of the class were Rebecca Brinkmann, salutatorian; and Deanna Head, valedictorian. Erik Schwarz, president of the Senior Class, Rebecca, and Deanna gave their final speeches.

After the class received diplomas from Superintendent William Curry and Principal William Overholser, they were treated to one last look at high school through a slide show. The Spotlighters accompanied the slide show with the songs: "One," "Through the Years," and "Memory." Erik led the class in the "turning of the tassels" and officially made the members of the class graduates. Erik also led the class in the singing of the alma mater, thus ending commencement exercises.

After the recessional, the class of 1983 had become a part of Mooresville High School's history.

At Robert's request, Robert was permitted to attend the ceremony with the other members.

Big events make for a busy finale MHS ends a "classy" year

The 1982-83 school year brought new and exciting things to Mooresville High and, as always, was a year to remember.

The biggest change took place when students became accustomed to seeing trucks, machinery, and construction workers and had their classes disrupted as the school received an energy-saving facelift.

The year was off to a good start after a 48-0 Homecoming victory over the Beech Grove Hornets.

The girls basketball and gymnastics teams both finished their seasons undefeated. The girls basketball team advanced to the semi-state before being defeated by Brebeuf, and Kim Kieninger qualified for the state gymnastics finals in two events and placed seventh in all-around competition.

The biggest issue resulted when the school board contemplated changing the open lunch policy. Students, faculty, and members of the community all voiced their opinions, and, as a result, MHS maintained an open lunch.

“Real class takes time”

Ninety-nine years brings “class”

As the year drew to a close, the month of May was very busy. The Spring Spectacular Jamboree played two nights to a full house and the prom, “Saturday in the Park,” and post prom, “The Roaring Twenties,” were attended by many. Gary Sarver and Theresa Flowers were crowned prince and princess, and Jeff Berg and Chris Gray reigned as king and queen.

Even though the year appeared to be over after commencement exercises and the final week of school, some students were still involved in school activities. Jenny Bauer qualified for state track finals in June, and the baseball team won its fifth straight sectional title.

In everything MHS students did in 1983, “Real Class” was apparent. They had a distinct pride in themselves and their school that was strictly MHS. It took 99 years for Moorhead to reach the “class” that they have been striving for, but “Real Class—Takes Time.”
